SEEKING GERMAN LOAN

Seek To Identify Skeleton Found In Muncie School

May Be Remains Of Lad Missing Since December 16, 1922

BODY FOUND IN SCHOOL AIRSHAFT

Discovery Of Skeleton Provides Muncie With Real Sensation

(International News Service)

MUNCIE, Ind., July 10.—Efforts were being made here today to identify the skeleton of a boy found in an airshaft of the Central High School building here, as the remains of Perlie Guelsby, 16, who had been missing since December 16, 1922.

Charles Cooper, uncle of Young Guelsby who was an orphan, has identified the rusty, closed jacknife found beside the body as one he had given his nephew. However, Cooper described his nephew as having a broken tooth on the upper left side and this did not correspond with the teeth in the skull of the skeleton.

Cooper told Coroner Clarence Piepho that young Guelsby had lived at his home at Whitely, a suburb of Muncie. The boy had quit school. Cooper said he thought the boy had joined the Navy, but he had never been heard from.

The skeleton which provided Muncie with a sensation was found yesterday by three plumbers, Otho Armstrong, 45, Zora Clevenger, 43, and Frances Clevenger, 22, who had entered the locked shaft to make some repairs.

The skeleton was taken to the Piepho morgue where hundreds of Muncie residents called last night to view it.

Close examination of the remains showed traces of long underwear. Young Guelsby wore such underwear at the time he disappeared, according to Cooper. Faded crimson stains were found on the clothing, indicating that the boy had bled before his death.

PA NEWC OBSERVES

Don't know that it will make any difference in the average of Uncle Sam's throwing ability, but did notice yesterday that some improvements were being made in the horseshoe pitching court on the post office property. Some of the most expert horseshoe pitchers of the district throw their "ringers" on this court.

Lawns are beginning to show the effect of the heat and lack of rain during the past week or so. Indications this morning are that a needed rain is to arrive during the day, however.

Tennis players report that the Boyles tennis courts, maintained as a part of the city playground operations, are not in good condition. This fact results in the courts not being used as fully as they would be, and means that the effort to provide playground facilities here are not as successful in this respect as they should be. The courts should be put in proper condition.

Weeds! Weeds! Weeds! These words are uttered most vociferously by people living on residential streets where there are vacant lots and this morning a resident near the corner of Carlisle and Winter avenues called Pa Newc to enter a complaint against the weeds at that site. The weeds are almost as high as a person and certainly do not add

Hoover Aroused Over "News Leaks"

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 10.—While Chief William H. Moran, of the U. S. Secret Service, continued his investigation of what the White House was elected to term "recent news leaks," newspaper men today were wondering whether President Hoover was attempting to impose a virtual news censorship.

Theodore G. Joslin, Secretary to the President, informed writers that it was the policy of the White House that "all information concerning the President should come only from stated official sources." How many such there are, he declined to say, but he is the sole member of the secretariat charged with contacting with the press.

The entire detail of Secret Service men attached to the White House meanwhile seemingly is under suspicion of having given out a series of stories which were irksome to Mr. Hoover. Chief Moran is investigating their source by order of Secretary Lawrence Richey, himself a former Secret Service man, and all of the sleuths are believed to have been called on the carpet.

Stories Leak Out

According to Joslin, "fifteen or twenty stories have leaked in the Dedication Program Opened Last Evening At New Epworth Church

'Old Epworth' Night Brings Back Former Members And Pastors For Service

Fellowship Dinner Is Planned For Tonight With Rev Williamson As Speaker

With scores of former members present for "Old Epworth Night," dedication services at the Epworth M. E. church which will last through next Wednesday, got under way last night at the new building, East Washington street and Butler avenue.

It was a joyful service and one which will linger long in the memory of the members of the congregation, marking as it does the commencement of a jubilee week which consummates the dream of a more beautiful temple of worship for the members of the congregation.

Grace chapel, where the service last evening were held, was filled to overflowing, over 400 people being present at the inaugural service. For over two hours they sat with rapt attention as the charter members of the church, former pastors and former members reminisced over days of the past at "Old Epworth", or spoke of the courage of the present congregation which had finally dared to take another step in the path of progress, and build themselves the fine new church home they have just completed.

The members of the congregation have worked hard to see their dreams fulfilled, a task which has been made doubly hard by the financial depression which swept over the country just as they had embarked on their enterprise. But once

Barnes Is Found Dead In His Bed

Neshannock Township Man Was Last Seen Working In Garden On Wednesday

HEART TROUBLE CAUSE OF DEATH

Hugh Barnes, aged about 65 years, was found dead in his home in Neshannock township, west of the Wilmington road, and just across the city line, Thursday evening. Barnes lived alone in a little one room building located on a hillside. Of late he has usually been seen working in his garden every day. Neighbors noticed that he was not around yesterday.

Harold McClelland, who lives some distance away, went over to the Barnes home to investigate. He found the door locked and the blinds down. At the rear of the house there was a window down a little at the top. McClelland climbed up a ladder and tried to see in but could not. However he noticed a peculiar odor.

Coroner J. P. Caldwell was called about 8 p. m. and entered the house through a window. He found Barnes lying dead on his bed. Barnes was in his working clothes, and indications were that he had been dead for some time. Richard and James Cook, who lives not far away, remembered that they had seen him on last Tuesday. Herb Roberts said that he had seen him out hoeing corn on Wednesday, shortly after

Youth Who Kills Woman Gets Life

JURY DELIBERATES FOR THREE HOURS

Marie Dal Pinto, alleged sweetheart of William H. Putscher, (Inset)

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, July 10. — William Putscher, 21, faced life imprisonment today for the murder of Mrs. Mildred Helsing, who was strangled to death with a black satin ribbon tied around her throat.

The jury deliberated three hours.

Putscher defended himself with an alibi but his former sweetheart and his companion in several small robberies failed to uphold his story of his doings on April 1, 1930 the day of the crime.

Although the state asked the death penalty, it was thought the jurors voted for imprisonment because the case was based almost entirely upon the youth's confession.

Mrs. Ray M. Zeigler and infant daughter, Carol Mae will leave the Jameson Memorial hospital for their home on Richelieu avenue Wednesday of the coming week.

Fort Worth Not To Attempt New Flight To Japan

BUMPY WEATHER BALKS REFUELING

"Would Have Been Suicide To Have Tried To Continue On"

(International News Service)

NOME, Alaska, July 10.—The "Fort Worth" will not be flown from Seattle to Tokio.

That much was definitely announced today by Reginald Robbins and H. S. Jones who were forced down by stormy weather near Nome yesterday morning as they were nearing the half-way mark on their journey.

Whether the Texas flyers will make a second attempt in another plane has not been determined.

Explains Failure

Robbins in explaining the failure said: "We tried as hard as we could but we could not manage the plane after we loaded 300 gallons of gasoline. We could not keep it in line long enough to take aboard a full load of 435 gallons."

They indicated they would try to sell the white-winged monoplane in Alaska.

Failure to complete the flight for the $25,000 prize offered by a Japanese newspaper was a disappointment to both the crew of the Fort Worth and its refueling ship.

"It was tough," Robbins said, "but the weather was so bad, what with no visibility at all, that it would have been suicide to attempt to go through."

The Texans ended their proposed non-stop Pacific flight 30 miles from Nome after vain attempts to take on

Dies In Chair For Killing Of Partner

Duncan Former Banker And Real Estate Man Goes To Chair At 12:10 A. M.

(International News Service)

McALESTER, Okla., July 10—Steadfastly maintaining his innocense, Paul Cole, 31, former banker and real estate man of Duncan, calmly went to his death in the electric chair at 12:10 a. m. today for the slaying of his business partner, Ernest Irby, Wewoka druggist.

Irby's bullet-riddled and stone weighed body was found in Lake Wewoka, March 24, 1930. The fact that he was to have appeared in federal court as a witness against Cole on a liquor charge led to an investigation of Cole's activities the day of the murder and the subsequent filing of a first degree murder charge.

Operators Fear Congress Tinkering Would Leave Coal Business Worse Off

By ROBERT S. THORNBURG

WASHINGTON, July 10.—American bituminous operators are unwilling to trade their individual independence for a form of government supervision similar to that of Great Britain. It was learned here today following a conference of soft coal operators with Secretary of Commerce Lamount and Secretary of Labor Doak, at which some of the problems of the industry were discussed.

The operators did not appear to feel, either, that the coal industry has reached a degree of distress that they should adopt the cooperative

Man Gored By Steer Is Dead

ONE OF STEERS IS STILL LOOSE

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, July 10.—Arthur Hay, 32, of the Northside, died in his home today of injuries suffered when he was gored while attempting to capture a steer which had escaped with two others from a truck enroute to a slaughter house late yesterday.

William Bush, 27, a marathon runner, who attempted to capture the second of the animals, suffered several fractured ribs and probably serious injuries when the steer charged him. The animal was finally shot by patrolman Arthur Jennings when he was pinned against a tree. The third animal has not been captured.

Hays directed a group of children playing nearby to safety. When the steer wandered into a yard, he attempted to close a gate and pen the animal inside. The steer charged him and hurled him to the street.

Bush was said by members of the family to be in a serious condition at his home today.

MUSSOLINI TO SUPPORT DISARMAMENT PROPOSAL

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

ROME, July 10.—Fascist Italy, often called a threat to the peace of Europe, was today definitely behind President Hoover's suggestion that the world disarm, following Premier Mussolini's informal conversation with Henry L. Stimson, American secretary of state, last night.

The Fascist dictator and Secretary Stimson met in the historical Azzo Venezia, at the foot of the famous Captoline hill, where the seat of the ancient Roman empire was located, and facing the huge monument to Victor Emmanuel II.

Immediately after the departure of Stimson Mussolini received American newspaper correspondents and told them that he had informed the American secretary that Italy would support any disarmament proposal that the United States might present at the Geneva conference opening February 2.

"Italy wants peace," said the leader of the black shirts, who was dressed in a suit of white linen, "and wishes to maintain peace. Italy is ready and willing to disarm, providing that others do likewise. If others are prepared to reduce equally, Italy is prepared to accept a military force of 10,000 rifles only.

"The Geneva disarmament conference," he went on, "must not be delayed. Italy insists that it be held on the date fixed. The world must choose its road. We are supporting Secretary Stimson on the road of peace."

A supply of 650,000 two-cent stamps, 100,000 of the one-cent variety, 500 one-dollar stamps and 5,000 of the five-cent air mail stamps were the larger items in the order.

ROME, July 10.—The breach between the Fascist government and the Catholic church was wider today as the result of Premier Mussolini's order of vesterday forbidding Fascists to belong to Action Cattolica.

Germany Seeks Huge Loan From French Nation

Dr. Hans Luther Is Negotiating In Paris For Reischsbank Loan

FRANCE REPORTS BUDGET SURPLUS

Conference In Paris May Avert Financial Crash In Germany

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, July 10.—Ironically enough, with Dr. Hans Luther, President of the German Reichsbank in Paris to negotiate for a huge loan to prevent Germany from falling into financial chaos, Francois Pietri, minister of the budget for France, today announced a huge surplus in the French treasury over budget requirements.

Pietri informed a meeting of the cabinet that tax collections for the year, up to June, were 114,000,000 francs over budget requirements. Tax collections for June alone were 67,000,000 francs over budget specifications.

Confer On Loan

This announcement was made while Dr. Luther was in conference with Clement Moret, governor of the bank of France, concerning the possibility of an immediate loan to the Reichsbank as a means to avert a disastrous financial crash in Germany. Luther and Moret were closeted together in the bank of France for three hours.

Pierre Etienne Flandin, minister of France was called in to attend the luncheon at the Bank of France with Moret and Luther, which gave rise to reports that Flandin had been called to explain to Dr. Luther the political conditions which would be attached to any loan by France to Germany. These reports were given added substance by the knowledge that Moret already has informed Luther of the maximum sum which it is estimated France could lend Germany.

The amount of the loan sought

Former Showgirl Victim Of Fire

Believe Death Of Mrs. Marion Day Berrien, At Forest Hills, Accidental

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 10.—The death of Mrs. Marion Day Berrien, former "Follies" showgirl, whose body was found in her fire wrecked home at Forest Hills yesterday, was probably accidental, detectives announced today.

While all evidence gathered by the police indicated the woman had evidently fallen asleep while smoking a cigarette on the wicker porch set where her body was discovered, Inspector John J. Gallagher, in in charge of detectives, however, said he would continue his investigation.

Assured that Lewis Gompers, a friend of the woman, had proved he was far from the scene at the time of the fire, Gallagher prepared today to question more of her recent associates.

An autopsy will be completed by Dr. Howard W. Neail at the Queen's morgue today.

Gas Rate Fight Results In Big Damage Claim

CLIMAXES ARGUMENT OVER GAS RATE CUT

(International News Service)

KANSAS CITY, July 10.—A damage suit for $12,000,000 was filed in the Jackson County Circuit Court here today by Henry L. Doherty, Utilities magnate, against the Kansas City Star Company, publishers of the Kansas City Star, climaxing the controversy between the newspaper, Gov. W. H. Woodring of Kansas and Doherty over the reduction of gas rates in Kansas.

The suit prayed for $6,000,000 actual damages and $6,000,000 punitive damages and also named as defendants George B. Longan, president of the Kansas City Star Company; Roy Roberts, managing editor, and Fred Trigg, Kansas editor.

Chief among the allegations contained in the suit was that the Star had wilfully misrepresented Doherty and the Doherty companies in the publication of "certain articles derogatory to the plaintiff."

Attorneys for Doherty said today that the suit was the first of a series of similar actions to be filed against the defendants.

prisons to which they were committed was being probed by the Department of Justice agents.

Secrecy in Probe

Considerable secrecy surrounds the investigation. It was said, however, that a letter borne by Paul Rabkin, a watch smuggler, was the "tip off". He had been brought to New York to face a new smuggling suspect. Last July Rabkin was sentenced to two years at Atlanta. Yet when he was wanted recently by federal officials to confront the new smuggler suspect he was found at Fort Wadsworth.

The letter was from a convict at Atlanta. The convict is said to have written Rabkin that he had raised a sum of money and wanted to buy a transfer to the fort.

It is understood that Rabkin paid $1,00 for his transfer. The federal officials refused to disclose to whom the money was paid.

Investigation disclosed that more than 1,000 convicts have been transferred from federal prisons to army detention camps to relieve congestion. Inquiry is now under way to learn how many of the favored convicts paid for their transfers.

having set their face toward the goal, they have labored untiringly, and now they are about to enjoy the fruits of their labor.

This spirit of jubilation seemed to permeate last evening's service, and the songs were sung with new joy; new fervor inspired their prayers, and there was a glow of happiness on the faces of all present.

Oldest Charter Member.

It was almost like a regular old fashioned testimonial meeting, as a great number of the charter members, former members and former pastors spoke impromptu.

Mrs. A. W. Reynolds, the oldest charter member of the congregation, was the first speaker called upon by the pastor, Dr. Samuel L. Maxwell.

Other charter members who were called upon were C. C. Crill, Clarence Crill and Mrs. A. R. Shaffer.

The oldest pastor present was Rev. J. C. McDonald of Chautauqua, N. Y., who has long been retired from active ministry. Rev. McDonald is now 80 years of age, but is still vigorous and spoke feelingly of the many kind memories retained from his pastorate at "Old Epworth".

Other former pastors of the Grace M. E. church and Epworth church, together with those who have gone out from the congregation into religious work, were Dr. C. G. Farr, district superintendent; Rev. Homer B. Davis of Sharon, Rev. Norris White, pastor of the Grace church of Oil City; Rev. Frank A. Wimer, pastor of the Corry church; Rev. J. L. Petrie, West Middlesex; Wilbur Flannery of this city, and Rev. Edward Blews, Free Methodist pastor, who is a former member of the congregation.

Wives Speak, Too.

Wives of former pastors, or members of their families who spoke, were Mrs. T. W. English of Edinboro, widow of Rev. Borland; Mrs. S. L. Maxwell, wife of the present pastor; Miss Mayme White, Mrs. Homer B. Davis, Mrs. Frank A. Wimer, Mrs. Wilbur Flannery, Mrs. J. L. Petrie and Mrs. C. G. Farr. There were others who also spoke during the evening.

Rev. Davis, pastor of the First M. E. church of Sharon, who preceded Dr. Maxwell at the Epworth church, sang a beautiful solo during the service.

Miss Lavina McConahy, Mrs. J. M. Pyle and Mrs. Homer B. Davis presided at the piano during the services.

Greetings were extended to Rev. C. J. Baker, Mrs. J. L. Stratton and Rev. Thomas Francis, who were unable to be present at the services last evening. Mrs. Stratton is seriously ill at her home on Haus avenue.

Tonight's Program.

This evening the Fellowship supper will be held, when members of other congregations in the city will break bread with the members of the Epworth congregation. Over 600 tickets have been sold for the dinner, which necessitates the serving of two tables.

The first table will be served at 5:30, while the second will be served at 6:30. Dr. C. J. Willaimson, pastor of the Highland U. P. church, will be the speaker of the evening, and those who had a part in the building of the congregation will speak.

The program of the evening follows:

past few weeks, and we are determined to find out where they came from." The story which precipitated the investigation was a brief item relating the fact that the President left his Rapidan camp so suddenly last Sunday to get back to Washington to resume the debt negotiations, the Secret Service men were forced to pile in their car while still buttoning their shirts, and a basket lunch was raced after him in a following car which caught up with the party far down the road.

A second story, the source of which is being probed, was another brief item relating that the President sent a negro doorman up to stop some carpenters from interfering with his after-lunch nap, and the negro solemnly informed the workmen that "the President has declared a moratorium on noise for the rest of the afternoon."

A third which annoyed the President told of how his giant Irish wolf hound had bitten one of the marines guarding his Rapidan camp.

What others were, Joslin refused to reveal, but he seemed confident he would ascertain their source.

It is believed probably that Mr. Barnes, coming in exhausted from his work, laid down on the bed and died from heart trouble. Mr. Barnes, in his younger days was employed at railroading. He came here from Beaver Falls about six years ago, and has since been living alone in the little house in which his body was found. COAL OPERATORS NOT ENTHUSED AT CONFERENCE

Only Routine Statement

Operators and government officials were reluctant to go further than a routine statement of Lamont which indicated that the industry felt nothing could be accomplished by a National Coal Conference at this time. The supposition had been, prior to the meeting, that it would pave the way for a gathering of miners with Doak later, a point conference with the Commerce and Labor Department Chiefs.

Neither Lamont nor Doak seemed to feel much encouraged at the prospects following the operators' conference.

There appeared to be some sentiment in the coal industry for a modification of the anti-trust laws which would permit the adoption of a system like that of Great Britain where through government supervision the operators receive a certain proportion of the available business.

Congress Tinkering Feared

However, a majority of operators, it was indicated, were said to feel that in anything but a very conservative congress tinkering with the Sherman or Clayton laws might make them even more objectionable than at present. There is much discussion of amendment of these laws so that cooperative agreements might be made by raw material producers to restrict production and thus conserve natural resources.

The feeling was that the West Virginia and probably the Alabama operators might oppose such a course.

It is said that since the war conditions in the coal industry have placed 3,000 mines of a 200,000,000 ton annual capacity on the non-production basis. A tremendous number of miners and other employes have been forced to seek other occupations, experts said.

The consolidation of mines also has been suggested as a solution and the recent judicial and administration attitude on mergers might encourage such a course. However, a solution would take time and would be a gradual process which would hardly immediately take care of the emergency.

by Dr. Luther from the International banks is not definitely known, but it has been estimated variously from $200,000,000 to $500,000,000. Before coming here Luther conferred with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and from here he will go to Basle to attend the directors' meeting of the bank of international settlements. Any loan granted to Germany would be made through the bank of international settlements, with the international banks of issue cooperating.

Flies To Paris

Paris, July 10.—Fighting desperately to save Germany from financial chaos, Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichsbank, arrived in Paris this morning.

He came not only to seek the bank of France's assistance in obtaining an international loan of about $360,000,000, but to convince skeptical Frenchmen of the Reich's precarious economic position.

The urgency of Dr. Luther's mission was evidenced by his hurried departure from Berlin yesterday. He flew to London, arriving there at noon. After conference with Montagu Norman, governor of the bank of England, and other English financial experts, he left London with Norman for Paris by the night train.

The German financial chief left the train at the Gare Du Nord, while Norman continued on to Basle Switzerland where presumably he will discuss the German situation with officers of the bank of international sttlements there. Dr. Luther was expected to proceed to Basle Saturday, so as to be able to attend the meeting of the rectors of the B. I. S. on Monday.

Besieged by correspondents on his arrival in Paris, Dr. Luther refused to reply to questions beyond saying that he would see Clement Moret, governor of the bank of France, today.

It was reported that he would confer with minister of finances Flandin and representatives of New York banks.

Dr. Luther also came to France to clear up misunderstandings concerning the Hoover Moratorium. France was said to expect Germany to pay reparations as usual on July 15, pending definite sanction of the Hoover plan after the meeting of financial experts in London July 17.

Dr. Luther was said to have brought to Paris proof that this would be an impossibility. It was believed that he would also take up the question of extending the $100,000,000 international loan maturing July 10.

referred indirectly to Premier Mussolini's statement to American newspaper correspondent yesterday in which Mussolini said Italy would back any disarmament program the United States might advance.

"It has been tradition since time immemorial to leave one's host make the statements," Secretary Stimson said.

Mr. Stimson said neither the American government nor he had any desire to have the world disarmament conference at Geneva postponed from its scheduled date, February 2, 1932.

"My conferences with Premier Mussolini and foreign minister were most cordial, satisfactory and frank," he said. "They left nothing to be desired. I learned a great deal from them."

The luncheon today was held at the Borghese museum. Secretary and Mrs. Stimson will leave Rome tomorrow for Paris, where they are due to arrive on Wednesday, next week.

"I will become a tourist again when I leave Rome," Secretary Stimson told newspaper men.

WILL CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Carroll of the Pulaski road will celebrate fifty years of married life on Saturday July 18, at a golden wedding anniversary party that will be complete with all the trimmings people usually demand when they are married so long.

It will be a happy day for the former Leuly Patton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Patton of Neshannock township, who became the bride of the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Carroll of Crider's Corners, Butler county on July 19, 1881.

The anniversary really falls on Sunday, but the Carrolls have decided not to celebrate on the Sabbath.

Mr. Carroll, now pensioned, was for 33 years a craneman at the Carnegie Steel Company's plant here. He was pensioned eight years ago and today is still hearty and looks younger than his age of 75 years.

The bride and groom of fifty years ago recall they were united in marriage by the Rev. J. K. Menhall in King Chapel church on the Pulaski-Harbor road.

The affair on Saturday will be held at the residence of the couple located on the Pulaski road near the intersection of the Wilmington road. Close relatives and friends will attend, including their children who are as follows:

Clinton Carroll, Mrs. Clark Shirk, Mrs. Harry Cochran, all of New Castle; Mrs. Frank Connor and Mrs. J. P. Watters of Aliquippa, Ralph Carroll of Newton Falls, O., and Mrs. Fred Reno of Pittsburgh.

BUSINESS EDITORS GIVE US WORDS OF CHEER

FEW men are in more intimate touch with business conditions throughout the nation than the editors of trade papers and magazines. Stanley A. Dennis, president of the National Conference of Business Paper Editors, has been making a survey and finds conditions encouraging. No less than 155 of these writers have contributed their views. The consensus of opinion is that business is now in the condition "which usually precedes a general improvement."

These editors of technical, trade, service and professional papers are trained observers who are careful and accurate in their work. They can not afford to exaggerate the facts. It is therefore particularly gratifying to find them reporting a stiff resistance to the downward trend and a disposition to hold prices at the present level preparatory to the improvement toward which nearly everybody is looking. "With goods moving," say these editors, "and the inventories of raw materials and finished products now liquidated, replacement buying cannot be much longer delayed."

From another source come more cheering words. Dr. Miller, manager of the National Association of Credit Men, in his monthly bulletin says: "The investment public has decided to come in and run a trial heat with the professional operators. Wall Street sentiment has been improved by President Hoover's moratorium as well as by two developments in the railroad situation. These are the combined appeal for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates and the announcement of the fact that the consolidation plan for the Eastern trunk lines will soon be ready for submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission." He does not expect a pronounced upturn before fall, although he finds that "wholesale and retail distribution is looking a little better and unemployment is being reduced in some parts of the country."

Aside from these professional opinions it can not be denied that there is a better feeling throughout the nation. The fear that has hitherto prevailed is gradually vanishing. The mass of the people are beginning to realize that we live in a great country with enormous natural resources and they are satisfied that abnormal depression can not last forever.

DISCARDING BEACH CENSORSHIP

In the fact that the Atlantic City authorities have revoked all rules regulating bathing costumes and henceforth will cock the eye of censorship only at the suit that causes a riot, there is no moral but there is a world of human psychology and further proof of the futility of such regulation.

A month of experimenting without formal and official beach censorship convinced the authorities that censorship represses none while inspiring many breaches of the rules it seeks to enforce. Eliminating the ol' swimmin' hole from comparison, the uncensored watering place is not different from the rigidly censored from the standpoint of what is worn or not worn there.

It is not censorship or the inhibitions of a beach guard that determines the degree of brevity of the bathing suit. Custom dictates such matters. The most conservative bathing suit worn today would have seemed scandalous to even the broadminded 15 years ago, and that which is considered moderately daring today would have been called indecent by the last generation.

Indecent behavior is not a matter of costume. There may have been a time when women went to the beach to be seen rather than to swim, but today millions of them are enthusiastic devotees of this aquatic sport and it is not a coincidence that the suit permitting the greatest freedom in the water is more often found in the water than on the beach.

THE CONSTITUTION!

Though she has been rebuilt from stem to stern and is smart with new timbers and fresh paint, there are 134 years of history in the frigate Constitution and some of the proudest memories of the nation and its navy are associated with her.

When the historic old warship was commissioned once more as a ship in the service of the government, there was brought to a triumphant culmination a long fight to save her from Davey Jones' locker that began when Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote in stirring verse to defend "Old Ironsides" from "the harpies of the shore."

The poet thought it "better that her shattered hulk should sink beneath the waves," but thousands of patriotic Americans, including many school children, thought it better that her keel plow the sea again, with sails set and flying her own flag as she did in the war of 1812.

Reconditioned and under full sail, the Constitution is a symbol of patriotism, carrying a message of duty to and achievement for one's country. None will see or broad her during her triumphal cruise without strong emotions and a sense of pride in the enviable history of the United States navy and the country's early shipbuilders.

The poet Holmes wrote, "Many an eye has danced to see that banner in the sky." Now it can be written in the present and future tense to the glory of both the old frigate and her country.

"THE TEST IS NOT PATENTED"

Whenever the spectacle of grasping greed suggests despair of human nature, it will be heartening to turn to the story of Dr. Stephen Moulton Babcock, who passed away yesterday at Madison at the age of eighty-eight.

More than forty years ago Dr. Babcock invented the Babcock test, a simple way of determining the butterfat content of milk and gave it out with the simple remark that the test is not patented.

That discovery revolutionized the dairy industry. It gave the dairyman with high-grade stock full value for his product at the creamery, where before that he had been paid the same as the dairyman with scrub cows. It enabled the dairyman, too, to find out which of his cows gave a profitable output and which gave yields so meager that they did not earn their board. And, on the other hand, it protected buyers of milk against adulterations by dishonest handlers. Literally, this test put millions of dollars into the pockets of dairymen all around the world.

Dr. Babcock did not get a penny out of this invention, though if he had been of that mind he could have patented it and grown immensely rich out of the profits, for everybody had to use the test once it was discovered. But he gave it free to the world, and though he gained no riches, he won a fame that reached around the earth.

So his was a life rich in service, though it might have been a poor life if its end had been gain instead of service.—The Duluth Herald.

Is It Small Boy's Fault? Blaming Person Who Used to Be A Feeling in Many of Us

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Long ago a small boy stood at the window of his nursery, looking wistfully out at the rain.

His brothers and his sisters were playing happily and noisily behind him, piling up blocks, working out puzzles pretending to be Indians and pirates, content to be indoors when the weather was bad.

The small boy at the window longed to be out there in the rain. He wanted to leave the nursery and tip-toe down the stairs and out a side door and then to play in the wet outdoors. To splash in puddles. To feel the rain on his small face. To let the pleasant showers fall upon him from bushes and trees. To be free and alone out there where lightning flashed and only grown-ups were on that wintry day.

But he didn't go. He had been told to stay indoors. He feared what would happen if he disobeyed, if he did what he so longed to do . . . . So he looked for a little while at the falling, attractive rain, and then he turned sadly away and picked up a book and curled up, all by himself, and consoled his wistful self with imaginary happenings.

Years later, when he was desperate and unhappy, and had done many, many other things he had never wanted to do, he blamed it all on that one dull day in the nursery. He said to himself that if he had followed his impulse and had run out of the nursery and out of the house and down that wet path to temporary joy and freedom, all would have been different. He would have gone along that way for all the rest of his life, and he would have been a happy man.

But he had fixed his course that day. From that one hour when he renounced his desire and cleaved to the law of the nursery, his sails were set in one direction, and he was forever lost.

I remember that pathetic little story so very well, because that feeling is in so many of us. We find ourselves in trouble and we look back to one small incident in our lives and say, "That was the turning point. If I had decided differently then, all would be otherwise now. I'm here because of that and now it's too late to change."

But somehow I don't think it's true. We are ashamed to blame other people for the sad fix we are in. We are proud to blame our recent selves. So we lay all the burden on the faraway child we used to be . . . . It isn't decent, it isn't honest, and it's cowardly. I can't find it in my heart to blame that small boy for everything that happens to us later on in life.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

The orator in Hyde Park was holding forth with great fervor, and constantly punctuating his discourse with references to Darwin's "Origin of Species."

A tall man and his short companion hung on the outskirts of the crowd, but were unable to get near the speaker.

"What's he talkin' about, Bill?" asked the small man, tired of craning his neck to no purpose.

"Eat more fruit, I think," replied the long one. "He keeps talkin' about oranges and peaches."

Can you remember when the old-fashioned politician used to visit all the saloons just before an election, lay a $5 bill on the bar and walk out and leave the change?

Texas bankers pay $5000 for every dead bandit. The idea is not new. Men with money have always bribed somebody else to do their killing. You find the story on every page of history—often called war for human rights, like our own Revolution—fought by farmers to enable the town man to evade taxes. Robbery with firearms is a capital offense in Texas, and the banker has a legal right to kill the man who would rob him. But when private citizens offer a reward for killing, they become by proxy a band of lynchers. They take the law into their own hands as mob members do. And the result is bad—inevitably. Now several men are to be tried for "framing" innocent simpletons—persuading stupid or drunk men to attempt a robbery and shooting them down for the reward. It would have been a clever scheme if their aim had been true, for dead men do not testify; but the victims escaped and talked. Now the whole scheme is in for an airing. I hope the bankers are persuaded to withdraw their offer. The precedent is too dangerous. It might prompt zealous drys to offer a reward for dead bootleggers—and then bootleggers would offer a reward for dead dry agents. We need better enforcement of laws but it must be done by the law's agents. A reign of crime is bad, but the reign of anonymous, irresponsible and self-appointed saviors of civilization is worse.

Every year this country liberates a quarter of a million convicts who have served their time among sullen and rebellious criminals. Nearly all of them come out with bitter memories. Most of them hate the society that imprisoned them. And the records show that most of them return to crime. Why wonder at that? Men do not endure punishment in humbleness of spirit. They feel mistreated. They think of the rich offenders who aren't punished. They brood over the injustice of law. And from their associates, many of whom are professional criminals, they absorb the under world's viewpoint and knowledge of crime's technique. It is a rotten system. While society continues to cage its enemies, it should segregate the embittered professionals and protect first offenders from contamination. It is a great folly to accord identical treatment to habitual criminals and men who would take their medicine and again become good citizens if given a chance. How strange to herd all offenders together when every breeder has wit enough to keep an egg-eating hen or a sheep-killing dog from mingling with the ones that are yet free of vice. How quickly civilization will advance when we learn to deal with men as intelligently as we deal with stock.

Post And Gatty Gain Acclaim For Their Flight Around The World

Wonderful Efficiency Of Men And Plane Lauded As Nation Looks Toward Day Of Greater Use Of Air For Transportation

High praise for the efficiency and courage of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty in their record flight around the world has been given by the press everywhere.

"The age of the air has dawned" says the PASADENA STAR-NEWS, with the forecast that "much of man's travel in future will be in the air," and the tribute to those travelers: "Gatty and Post have blazed the way. Col. Lindbergh was a trail blazer in the air. These intrepid flyers hasten the coming of air transport over wide distances by demonstrating that traveling by air on long journeys is safe and practicable—safe enough to justify the risk." The LINCOLN STATE JOURNAL, reviewing the ocean flights, points to the gain "in the safety factor," though conceding that "the recent trip was not without hazard."

"The really marvelous phase of their achievement is its flawless perfection of performance, both human and mechanical," the MINNEAPOLIS STAR observes, while the ATLANTA JOURNAL credits them with 'intelligent heroism," and the PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE sees them "writing a chapter of importance to the history of aviation" and holds that "attention will be turned eventually to the prospect of nonstop flights over the circle by the refueling method."

"What is important" according to the SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) UNION "is that the plane consumed only about four and a half days of flying time to girdle the globe a fact which opens a vista of future round-the-world flights at greater speed." The AKRON BEACON JOURNAL declares that 'the young men have given the world a demonstration of what it is possible to do with a modern airplane," and the JERSEY CITY JOURNAL emphasizes the fact that "they had numerous storms, heavy rains and thick fogs, so dangerous at some phases of the trip that they flew 'with their hearts in their mouths' " that "they and their plane were able to meet these conditions and survive."

"They have the dash and courage which makes heroes of men," asserts the OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES with the special tribute to Wiley Post that "Oklahoma feels a special pride in this greatest race against time," and that "the development of aviation which responded to Lindbergh's dash to Paris will gain additional momentum from this flight around the world." The ROCK ISLAND ARGUS avers that "history will record that their flight was the greatest ever made" and the ROANOKE TIMES concludes that they "have demonstrated their worthiness to be ranked in the select company which includes such famous names as those of Lindbergh, Chamberlin and Byrd."

"They are national heroes," says the SALT LAKE DESERET NEWS "and whether their time is beaten or not, their eminence as pioneers of the air will never be lost. Their great journey suggests another kind of flight. Perhaps the next record around the world will be to carry a letter or a passenger by a relay team." The SAN ANTONIO EXPRESS offers the estimate: "By their astonding flight Post and Gatty have won imperishable fame for themselves and for American aviation. To a transatlantic hop—swift and unerring—they added a flight over Bering Sea, which often is covered with fog and swept by severe storms. This achievement should bring about the establishment of airways connecting North America, Europe and Asia in a vast network, which heretofore has been considered impracticable."

"Science and engineering skill and ingenuity will in the not so distant future design an air machine capable of circling the globe in four days or less," in the opinion of the MERIDIAN STAR, while the SCHENECTADY GAZETTE makes the comment that 'it would seem that this record of less than five days flying time must stand indefinitely, yet there will be little surprise if a similar flight is made in an even shorter period."

Praise for the performance of the airpalne is given by the MILWAUKEE SENTINEL, and the CHARLOTTE NEWS lauds 'the faithful performance of man and machine," while the CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR exclaims: "Great fliers, a great plane, and great good fortune!" The ROCHESTER TIMES-UNION apraises the achievement: "Post and Gatty have set a new record for speed around the world. They must be credited also with daring that is not found in every heart, as well as tireless energy. Their plane, too, deserves some praise. It shows how far we have progressed in the manufacture of airplanes. It is doubtful if even the Spirit of St. Louis could have stood up to the steady grind the Winnie Mae has come through so proudly. It certainly could not have made equal speed. Also, Gatty did a splendid job of navigation. These two Americans have done in less than nine days what the mighty imagination of Jules Verne visioned could be done in 80 days. How soon may we expect the record of Post and Gatty to be wiped out, but not forgotten, by some flier or fliers going around the world in 80 hours!"

"Post and Gatty have performed a splendid feat" declares the CHARLESTON (S. C.) EVENING POST, "with a precision that comes nearer to matching Lindbergh's solo flight from New York to Paris than any other of the many adventures of the flying men. The crossing of the Atlantic was only incidental to their undertaking and not the most difficult nor hazardous phase of it, perhaps. They flew as well over the Siberian waste and above the cold Bering Sea, and they stuck to their schedule without variation or misadventure to the point almost of exhaustion, returning to the very spot from which they had departed in but one day more than a week. It was a great demonstration of the quality of the machine in which they flew and of the men who piloted it."

PUTTING ON A SHOW?

Concinved that you can't save money you are not trying to save?

Every time you get a little ahead something happens, you say.

In the stores prices are down a little but you can't take advantage of them because you are financially short.

But are you really curtailing needless expense?

Thousands are thoroughly and carefully paring expenditure.

But just as many others are still trying to keep up with their neighborhood friends in dress and social pleasures.

They entertain more lavishly than they can afford.

Social life must not be neglected is their code.

But when society means competition in seeing who can get up the most elaborate entertainment it becomes a contest and loses its friendly basis.

Society should mean a generous friendly feeling of give and take in the interests of community or congenial group gathering.

When it becomes a burden, wher it is a temptation to spend more than personal conditions warrant, it takes character to stay out of it and save money.

Haven't you noticed that it is the men with strong character who make the largest honest accumulations?

THE FOOLISH FISHERMAN

There was a foolish fisherman who sat beanth a tree
Upon the river bank and kept his rod across his knee.
His face was long and solemn and great furrows lined his brow
And this he sadly said to me: "The fish aren't biting now!"

"Why don't you bait your hook?" said
I. "The stream is flowing by.
You might perchance catch something here if only you would try.
You have the rod, the line, the hook
—just turn your tackle loose
And fish the stream for all your're worth." He muttered: "What's the use?"

"My neighbors tried a month ago,
they all came back at night
And said they'd fished the stream for miles and couldn't get a bite
I hear it everywhere I go; round
here all folks agree
The fishing isn't near as good as what it used to be."

"There must be fish in here," I said.
"Yes, maybe one or two.
But I'm not going to work all day and only get a few.
I'm going to sit beneath this tree and wait until I know
The fish are biting here the way they did three years ago."

"Here're Your Stamps"-- But Fussy-Type Mailers Frown Upon Licking Them

It's funny—so the postal clerks say—to watch the average person lick postage stamps to apply them to their own package when they're mailing parcels at the post office. Most of them rush through with it unthinkingly, they say, but there are some who will ponder and frown.

The postal regulation requiring clerks to have the mailers apply the stamps, now enforced rigidly, was at first carried out only occasionally.

"Of course," interrupted one of the clerks, "when a lady steps up to the window dressed to perfection, wearing snow white gloves or perhaps some other kind that cause inconvenience to remove, I usually apply the stamp for her—oftentimes, too, at her request."

But it's only the rare case nowadays that mailers don't have to stick their own.

"Some will make the most terrible faces when you place a stamp in front of them." The clerk continued, "when they lick the stamp the expression magnifies. It's funny though, we have a sponge setting right before them for the purpose, but only one in ten uses it."

Occasionally, it's very, very seldom though, a patron will refuse to stick their stamps and rush away from the window. The law, as it reads, does not require the clerks to affix them in such a case.

At the office here, as in other cities, a C. O. D. demurrage regulation requires patrons to pay five cents per day on packages left on the shelves for more than 15 days. The clerks now report clear shelves make parcel handling easier than formerly, when packages would be left around for any length of time.

Visitors' Day At Camp Rentz

Boys Take Dip In Slippery Rock—Receive Special Treat Third Day

Visitors' day was observed at the Fred L. Rentz Y. M. C. A. Camp on Wednesday, the day being appointed and such for the remainder of the camping season. Many parents were on hand and inspected the camp.

During chapel Physical Director Henry MacNichols gave an appropriate talk: "Planting the Right Seeds."

The usual morning games were played. Mushball, volley ball and baseball occupied their attention, with the Black Hawks winning the first, 10-1, the Orioles capturing the second and the Vampires winning in baseball, 13-12.

A chicken dinner was prepared by "Brownie," the cook was enjoyed during the noon hour.

Tent inspection was won by Tent 4 and Tent 5, with Tent leaders Ed Fritz, Jr., and Bud Purdue leaders of the inspected tents in charge. The inspection was conducted on a basis of cleanliness and neatness. The willing percentage was 100.

The heat of the afternoon was forestalled by a refreshing dip in the Slippery Rock. Fishing has established itself as a favorite sport at camp and several small catches have been reported.

Several miracles of sport have been reported during the past few days. This became a witnessed fact when a baseball was hit into a tree top and remained there for 15 or 20 minutes.

Activities were suspended in the evening until dark on Wednesday when a camp fire was lighted. The camp cook, Earl Brown, entertained the boys by recounting several of his adventures in France.

Novelist To Figure In Striking Mural

(International News Service)

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10—Gouverneur Morris, California novelist, is to be the central figure in a series of murals on the walls of his Monterey home which will be painted by Viscount Hastings, young British painter, it is learned here.

The mural will be one of the most unique in the world, according to the young artist, who is now working with the famous Mexican artist, Diego Rivera on a large mural in the lecture room of the California School of Fine Arts.

The scenes in the proposed mural will be taken from the life experiences of the famous novelist and will shift from the South Seas to California and to New York, all places where Morris has lived and which he has made the locale of his stories.

A number of the most famous of Morris' fictional heroes will also be preserved in the paintings.

Jobs For College Men Not Plentiful

Boston University Unable To Place All Of Graduates

(International News Service)

BOSTON, July 10.—According to Professor Horace G. Thacker, head of the vocational department at Boston university's college of business administration, his department has been able to make but 70 per cent of placements for graduates as were made a year ago. Large corporations are slashing their quotas of college men in order to hire, if any, those men they have laid off from time to time.

Professor Thacker seems to think, however, that the percentage of those graduates for which jobs have been secured, is pleasing in the light of current conditions.

Twelve large corporations which have never failed in the past five years to send representatives to the Boston university college of business administration vocational department for interviews have failed to send any representatives this year.

Part time jobs, too, have been scarce. Joseph French, director of this phase of employment, reports that part-time placements for winter and summer jobs have fallen off approximately 20 per cent.

The school of education graduates are not finding positions hard to secure even though private schools are cutting down their staffs, for there is an increased demand for directors and teachers in the field of physical education.

BUTTE, Mont., July 10—One week should be long enough for a fortune teller to purge $1,500 in cash of the "evil spirits" which surrounded it.

At least so thought a Butte woman and she set out to find "Madame Stella" to whom she had intrusted the money for purification. She was not to be found, however, and police were consulted.

The victim said she had drawn the money out of the bank and turned it over to the seer for treatment.

Union Wage Scale On State Contracts

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, July 10.—Workers on state projects for which contracts are let by the Department of Property and Supplies today were assured of receiving a union wage scale for their work.

At a conference here with representatives of nineteen trade organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the Building Trades Council, James F. Malone, head of the department assured them that only skilled labor would be employed on state projects and union-labor scale of pay would be adopted.

"The commonwealth," said Malone, "Is not going to be a victim of mushroom organizations of unskilled labor primarily organized for state work. We have agreed to accept and stand by union labor throughout the state but will not permit wildcat organizers to make the state their particular prey in large contracts about to be let."

A minimum wage scale of 50 cents an hour for unskilled labor in cities and 40 cents an hour in rural districts has been agreed upon by the state and contractors, he said.

Union representatives promised Malone they would co-operate with the department, particulary in districts where there is no labor organization or established wage rate.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Equipment recently in use in the construction of the Welland ship canal which connects Lake Erie with Lake Ontario and forms an important link in the St. Lawrence waterways is now being used in extensive harbor improvement for the port of St. John. Upwards of $5,000,000 is being spent in initial undertakings to provide a new ocean pier, grain elevator with conveyor galleries, new transit sheds, etc. The grain elevator is designed to hold 1,500,000 bushels of wheat.

Will Penned In Trenches Is Filed

Will Offered For Probate Almost Twelve Years After Making

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 10.—The will of a soldier, hastily scrawled in the front line trenches at St. Mihiel in the World War a few hours before Henry Joseph Keckhut, of Philadelphia, a private, smilingly met his death has been filed for probate here.

The short, terse lines tell briefly the story of a soldier who knew he would never survive the grim American offensive at St. Mihiel. Keckhut was killed in action September 17, 1919.

The will, with other personal effects, was returned by the war department to his mother, Mrs. Henrietta Keckhut, who failed to file it for probate because she feared an attack would be made on its legality.

Mrs. Keckhut died April 19, 1930, and Rita Keckhut, a sister, and beneficiary, filed the document for probate, more than 12 years after the soldier's death. The private who died "happy" issued instructions in his will for the distribution of his War Risk insurance.

Dobbin's Reign It Not Waning

(International News Service)

QUEBEC CITY, Quebec, July 10.—Aeroplanes, gliders, dirigibles, motor cars and whatever other modern mediums of transportation there are or may be contemplated are not as yet affecting the farm horse. Old Dobbin's reign shows no immediate signs of waning, according to J. C. Morel, General Secretary of the Association of Blacksmiths for the Province of Quebec, who states that between the years 1923 and 1929 the number of horses in Quebec increased by nearly 30,000.

In 1923 there were 341,641 horses throughout the province and 369,060 in 1929. In the city of Montreal, there were 699 more horses in 1930 than in the previous year. A Canadian-wide tally of the number of farm horses made in June, 1930, showed there were 3,295,028 or only 105,324 less than in 1920.

While horses continue to increase in numbers in the Province of Quebec so do motor cars. For the first three months of this year the total registrations were 121,104 or about 12,000 more than in the corresponding period in 1930.

Priest, Parishioner, Patent Invention

(International News Service)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 10.—Working patiently for two years with one of his Negro parishioners, Father Joseph M. Bryan, pastor of . Rita Catholic Church here, has invented a device which will eliminate "hot boxes" on trains, in his opinion.

"Our pump," Father Bryan said, "throws two streams of oil directly on the part to be kept cool. Trainmen won't have to worry about waste catching fire if the railroads use the pump in the journals. It can be used in automobiles just as well."

Bethlehem Cuts Off Tax Penalty

BETHLEHEM, Pa., July 10—Hoping to stimulate payment of delinquent taxes, city council here has declared a "morotorium" on the penalty of one percent, imposed upon taxes still due after July 1. It was also announced that tax payments would be accepted on the installment plan.

McGovern Says Regular Habits Ease Headaches

Must First Determine Cause Of Particular Kind Of Headache

By ARTIE McGOVERN
(Written Exclusively for and Copyright by International News Service, 1931)

NEW YORK, July 10.—Of all minor ailments to which the human race is subject probably none is more common than headache. Occasional headaches at long intervals are usually caused by some transient condition which is neither difficult to locate nor to overcome. On the other hand, chronic headaches are very serious afflictions which often baffle the victim seeking escape from them.

The person who chooses to diagnose his own case may lay it to "eye strain" or the need of a "change", to overwork, to sinus trouble, infected teeth, anaemia, high blood pressure or even too much smoking.

Any one of these things may be true, but the first step in overcoming this annoying affliction is to determine definitely the cause, for headaches are an indication of disease and not a disease in themselves.

The person who suffers from constant headaches is all too apt to resort to some form of drug for relief. True, this will kill the pain temporarily, but may kill the patient permanently and in this latter event only will they cure the headache!

A thorough physical examination should reveal the real reason for chronic headache, and your physician in such a case is your best friend. If anything is organically wrong he will discover it and lead you on to the path to correct it. However, in my experience I have found that most headaches are the result of faulty hygienic habits and a ruthless examination of your own daily living rules may show you just where you are failing to live according to the laws of nature and why you are paying the penalty. Examine your daily schedule carefully. Are your hours regular? Do you eat your meals slowly? Do you get sufficient exercise daily? Are you drinking at least six glasses of water every day? Do you suffer from faulty elimination? Do you over-indulge in eating, drinking or other "forbidden fruits?"

In the answers to these questions you may find the reason for your constant headaches and in overcoming whatever is wrong you will overcome your distressing ailment.

Flower Bed, Cat And Stone Cause Trouble Aplenty

Lancaster East Side Section Given Thrill By Act Staged By Cat And Woman

LANCASTER, Pa., July 10.—A cat, a stone and a flower bed, innocuous in themselves, gave Lancaster's East End almost half a day of excitement recently.

The cat got into the flower bed and was wrecking havoc among the blooms. The woman owner heaved the stone which struck tabby amidships and sent it leaping over a fence into a sewer, from whence it failed to emerge.

The excited woman called police but they were unable to rescue the cat. The animal was finally retrieved when the street department sent out an emergency truck and crew and opened up the sewer.

Studied; Now Free

Crime does not pay, but study does. Carl J. Bates (above) taking advantage of law books at the disposal of inmates of the Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet, studied diligently and gained his freedom from prison through what he learned of law. Appearing before a Chicago judge for a petitioned rehearing of his case, Bates proved he was illegally incarcerated since he was indicted for larceny, but was tried for embezzlement.

"Given" 100 Years

Coy Thompson (above), convicted Chicago slayer of Policeman James Casey, was sentenced to 100 years in prison by Judge Finnegan when a jury found him guilty of the murder of the police officer. Although Thompson pleaded not guilty to the charge, the judge was not slow in putting him behind bars for a longer time than he'll ever see.

Arizona Fights For High Tariff To Save Copper

Democratic State Changes Mind In Regard To Matter

(International News Service)

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 10.—Arizona, a Democratic state which usually has opposed the principles of a protective tariff, has changed its mind and now is fighting for tariff revision in an effort to revive the faltering copper industry.

At present the fight is being waged before the federal tariff commission, now engaged in an investigation of copper production in foreign and domestic fields.

Governor George W. P. Hunt, Democratic veteran who is serving his seventh term, is directing the fight. He is being aided by a special Arizona copper commission which is preparing facts for presentation to federal tariff experts.

State Leads in Copper

Curtailed production, part time employment and the closing of mines forced the issue on Governor Hunt, Arizona he explained is the leading copper state of the Union. The mining companies pay approximately one half of all state taxes. As a result, Governor Hunt declared the prosperity of Arizona copper producers is a matter of vital importance for the state as a whole.

Mother Asks That Prayer Be Printed

Worked-Out Parent Problems Sent To Aid Others

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Division Parental Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

"DEAR DR. MYERS: You have solved so many, many problems for me. Please let me solve one for you! Your article on the elusive key made me smile. How simple to solve and yet how human to keep on with annoyances that become a habit. Why not buy a duplicate key just for yourself and sew it in your favorite coat pocket? Why didn't you think of that before you ruined that window frame?

"You wrote an article some time ago on 'Children's Prayers'; that especially helped and pleased me. The children had gotten so they didn't want to say their prayers (and when 'five and four' make up their minds!—the other is but nine months and hasn't become a 'problem' as yet.) Well, when I read them your prayer they loved to say it, and we had it all memorized, but then there was sickness and prayers (for them) were neglected; the slip with the prayer on was lost and I can only remember the beginning, 'Dear God, before I shut my eyes up tight, I want to say to you good night.' So I am enclosing a self-addressed envelope in the hope that you will have a copy and will be so kind as to send it to me."

Answer: Here it is:

"Dear God, before I shut my eyes up tight,
I want to say to you goodnight,
And thank you for this lovely day,
So full of laughter, joy and play.

"For my daddy and my mother dear
I thank you most. I know you'll hear
This little prayer, and 'specially would
I like to have you make me good."

"There are two problems I have worked out for myself, and perhaps they might help some other mother if you care to use them sometime. One is to take two large boxes, and divide the children's toys, 'junk' included, for I find all cans, etc., are much preferred to expensive toys. Put one box in the attic and the next rainy day bring that box down and take up the one they have been playing with for the next time they are forced to stay indoors. It really works beautifully. Rainy days have no horrors for us.

"Also, there is a set of dishes that I keep in the attic, and for the evening meal of a rainy day I bring these down and put cocoa in the tea pot, sugar in the sugar bowl, cream in the pitcher, and call it a party—and after being shut up all day they go to bed happy!

"Here is the other: A year ago a friend was visiting us and I thought it would be fun for the children to go to the station to see her off. My little boy was holding my hand when the train came in, and I felt him shiver and grip my hand. Although he had never been near a train before, I had no idea he would be frightened. That night at two o'clock he woke up screaming for me. For four nights he woke up at the same time, and I would have to leave a dim light in his room to quiet him.

Then I realized it was the last train coming in at night that woke him up, although we live a quarter of a mile from the station! Well, after finding out the cause of his alarm, it was easy then to remedy. I got him to listen to the trains in the day time and told him that was just the same as hearing them at night. I also left a clock in his room and told him to listen to it tick. Listening to that, he forgot about the other noise that scared him. We have never had any more trouble."

HURRY, MEN!

Two spinsters were discussing men.

"Which would you desire most in your husband: brains, wealth or appearance?" asked one.

"Appearance," snapped the other, "and the sooner the better."

Greets 'Em Officially

Chicago's New Mayor Selects Handshaker Who May Outdo New York's Grover Whalen In Welcoming Dignitaries

GEORGE D GAW
Chicago's new official greeter

By E. M. CIPRIANI
Central Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, July 10.—When visiting notables honor this city with their presence from now on, they will be extended a civic welcome by George D. Gaw.

Gaw is Chicago's official greeter. He was so appointed by Mayor Anton J. Cermak. His duties, for which he is well qualified, will bring him face to face with every arrival of consequence, from world flyers to foreign potentates—and, perhaps movie stars.

With a Flourish

Welcoming of such guests will be done with a flourish. Gaw will ride in a snow white automombile. Preceding him and his guests will be two pure white motorcycles, manned by handsome policemen.

It is all Mayor Cermak's idea. The mayor, a methodical, efficient man, relishes a little color. The drab formalities of saying, "howdy" to distinguished visitors lacked that glamorous luster. Mayor Cermak determined to rectify it. He has done so; and in a business way.

Some time ago the city ordered 20 new squad cars and as many new motorcycles for the police department. Here the mayor's business acumen came into play. It was suggested to the automobile and motorcycle dealers that something extra ought to be thrown in on such large orders. They took the hint with the result that the snow white car and the snow white motorcycles were included without cost in the order.

All Mayor Cermak then needed was an official greeter. All mayors have such representatives. Mayor Walker, in New York, has his Grover Whalen; Former Mayor Thompson had his William D. Saltiel. Mayor Cermak scanned the list of available Chicagoans. He selected Gaw.

Well Qualified

Gaw accepted the role. He has the poise and bearing requisite to such a task. He is worldly traveled well educated and wealthy. He started at the proverbial bottom, entered business here with $500, and today owns a huge yacht, several machines and is president of the Gaw-O'Hara Envelope company.

"Sure I'll like the job," commented Gaw. "I like to meet people, and let them know what a really wonderful city Chicago is."

About 1933, when the World's Fair gets under way here, Gaw will be fully occupied. With the entry of hundreds of thousands of visitors, and hundreds of them worthy of a civic welcome, Gaw's friends predict he'll need two snow white cars, and four snow white motorcycles to help him.

Fifty-Four Drivers Have Clean Safety Record For Six Months

Officials and operators of the Penn-Ohio Coach Lines Company will unite next Tuesday evening in celebrating an outstanding safety record in the operation of the inter-urban coaches over more than 600 miles of routes in the first six months of this year.

The celebration will be in the form of a banquet held in the Parkman community hall, Parkman, O., at which operators and officials will be present from the Akron, Canton, Youngstown and Cleveland divisions.

Of the fifty-eight operators on the Penn-Ohio lines fifty-four operated their coaches through city streets and over heavily traveled highways without responsibility for a single accident from January 1 to July 1. In this period the coaches of the company traveled 1,420,416 miles, carrying passengers to and from Cleveland, Akron, Canton, Warren, Niles and Youngstown, O., and New Castle, Sharon and Greenville, Pa., and other nearby communities in both states.

Dinner celebrations of the safe operation of the Penn-Ohio coach operators are held each six months as recognition by the company of the achievement of the operators. Following the dinner Tuesday evening at Parkman there will be a program of entertainment. Pierre V. C. See, vice president and general manager of the company, will preside and the principal address of congratulation to the men will be made by R. N. Graham, vice president. Arrangements for the celebration have been made by A. H. Gray, superintendent of the coach lines, assisted by W. H. Cromwell of Parkman.

DON'T they look healthy? This is Mrs. H. L. Buell and her young daughter, of Marietta, Ohio.

Listen to what she says...

"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I came into womanhood. I was so nervous, that I couldn't rest at night.

"After I took your compound I felt so very much better.

"Then before my baby was born I took the compound again. I felt well and strong through the period.

"I was never in bed a day. I could rest good at night too.

"I praise your compound very highly. There has never been any other medicine that has done me so much good."

If you feel tired, nervous, rundown... why don't you try a few bottles of Vegetable Compound.

Urges Churches To Use Newspaper 'Ads'

(International News Service)

LUTHERLAND, Pa., July 10.—"The newspapers offers one of the most effective mediums of religious appeal and church information ever known," the Rev. Dr. Walter A. Maier, speaker during the national Lutheran radio hour, told members of the International Walther League at their annual convention here.

"The church must advertise," Dr. Maier declared. "The church which employs the press for publicity purposes and which tells about its work through the insertions of paid advertisements will ultimately attract the attention of masses."

MY NEW YORK

BY JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK, July ...—New York night life is getting me. My hand trembles and unless I am careful my typewriter keys will click out c½-&%"(instead of the brilliant phrase, I had in mind. Here it is ten o'clock in the morning and I ache all over with the exertions of a headlong Gotham evening.

We were a merry party, careening down Broadway. After a round of cocoanut-juice flips, which are the newest offering of the corner stands which used to dispense orange juice, we repaired to an emporium of the New Night Life and played two games of shuffleboard, one of ping-pong and were still resting after a go at badminton.

Emerging from the ping-pong hot spot, we cast about for even more heady diversion. There remained, of course, the midget golf links behind the Roxy; and the outdoor bowling alleys adjoining. But we yearned for more exotic goings-on.

A whispered word to the driver of a Checker cab and we were whisking toward the Queensborough Bridge. High, magisterial and correct loomed the apartment houses along the East River. Here were we, four restless strays of a post-war generation, caring nothing for our elders, seeking pleasure, pleasure! If the good folk in the fifteen-room duplexes on the left only knew!

Across the river, deep in Jackson Heights, we approached our destination—aglow with sulpurous and sinister radiance—an archery range, a shooting gallery with liquid-air rifles and golfer's driving tees. The archery and the guns with little tubes attached, supplying the liquid air, were the most fun.

From the feel in my hands of a strong bow, an arrow held firmly in the groove (with the aid of an attendant) I sensed how William Tell surely felt—and I shuddered anew for his son. Incidentally, I understand now why the redmen, who depended on bow-and-arrow for meat, became a vanishing race. They starved to death.

ALL-HEARING "MIKE."

A new Jimmy Walker story testifies once more to the omniscience of the radio among us. And reanimates an old temperamental flair of the Mayor's.

Listeners-in over WNYC not long ago heard Hizzonner's voice, from a local banquet table, lamenting that he must perforce rush away so early in the evening. He was sorry, but he'd promised to look in on a benefit dinner for the city's brave policemen and firemen.

Eight minutes later, through the same WNYC circuit, came the announcement: "This is Madison Square Garden, ladies and gentlemen. The fight is about to begin. That big yell you just heard is the welcome of the crowd for Mayor Jimmy Walker, who just arrived!"

McKeesport Man Stabbed To Death By Man Who Enticed His Children

HAD STAYED HOME TO "PLAY WITH KIDS"

(International News Service)

McKEESPORT, Pa., July 10—Mike Jeney's love of staying home and playing with the kids" cost him his life today. He died enroute to McKeesport hospital this morning.

Mike had been working two days a week as a laborer. On the off days he played with his children in the yard of his home.

He was invited to a party last night, but—

"I'd rather stay at home and play with the kids" said Mike.

Mike and his wife and the couple's five children were on the lawn in front of the humble home. A child's scream came suddenly from the alley at the side of the house.

Mike knew what the scream meant. For several weeks, his wife said, a man had been enticing children into the alley by offering them nickles.

Running into the alley Mike grabbed an unknown man. There was a brief struggle while a frightened child fled. Then her attacker whipped out a knife and plunged it into Mike's chest.

The assailant fled. Mike's 14 year old daughter, Mary, gave chase. Unable to overtake the man, she hurled a tumbler at him, she sobbed.

"I hit him right back of the ear. I'm sorry it wasn't an axe."

Police said they have a good description of the stabber.

Landslide Causes Train Derailment

Fast Express And Freight Train Figure In Lehigh Valley Crash

(International News Service)

BETHLEHEM, Pa., July 10.—Two engines and nine express cars of the Lehigh Valley railroad were derailed today when they ran into a small landslide near White Haven, Pa., according to reports to the Bethlehem offices. No one was injured.

A fast freight and express train bound from Jersey City to Buffalo first ran into the small slide which had been loosened by recent rains in the mountainous section near White Haven, and the engine and seven cars jumped the track. One of the cars toppled onto the eastbound tracks. Before the wreckage could be cleared the No. 4 passenger train from Buffalo heading east came along and the engine and two express cars of this train also were derailed, according to advices received here.

White Says Dysart Capable, Efficient

Says He Can Be Returned To Police If Available When Needed

Solicitor Robert White today detailed in a communication to city council that should council desire to have him return Henry Dysart to the city police force he would be agreeable but pointed out that Dysart had been of invaluable aid to the city as an inspector in the legal department.

He pointed out that liens involving $11,000, must be collected before February and also declared that the city had won out on most of its cases since Dysart was named owing to his investigations and preparation of evidence.

White told council in the letter that should they wish to assign Dysart to duty in the police department owing to economic reasons they could do so but he would like to have Dysart's services when needed. He said that his study showed Dysart could be used for work that would require 280 hours.

Council ordered the communication accepted and filed.

May Ask Railway Company To Pay

M. Putterman, taken into custody while selling melons in the seventh ward district by Officers Hagan and Constable Stewart, on Thursday, was brought to the central police station, where he paid a fine of $5 on a charge of peddling without a license. Gangsters Kill Two In Chicago

South Side Beer War Results In Two Killings Early Today

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, July 10.—Discovery of the body of Frank Coliondo, 30, reputed alcohol runner and gangster, today presented police with two murder mysteries, both of which were outgrowths of a south side "beer war", according to detectives.

Only a few hours after Frank Palko, 41, Calumet City, Ill., soft drink parlor owner, was slain in the rear of his bar, Coliondo was taken for a "ride" by gang foes and his body dumped in the rear of a south side dwelling.

Coliondo, a minor figure in the liquor racket, had been shot through the head. The body lay face downward in a back room of the unoccupied dwelling.

Children Can Swim In Dam They Built

Council Indicates They Will Not Remove Children's Swimming Hole

Indications are that the city will not remove the dam in which children swim in the Neshannock creek near the Pennsylvania railroad crossing in Croton avenue as Councilman Genkinger today told children: "Go ahead, children, you can swim." Judging from the attitude displayed by other members of council which met in city hall, they concurred in Genkinger's instructions.

It had been charged the children made too much noise and that nearby residents who work nights could not sleep in the daytime. William Heitz, a nearby resident, alleged this to be untrue. He said it was the best place for the dam and that at least 75 children bathe there each day and parents set beneath shade trees and see that no accidents occur.

After Heitz had addressed council, Jimmy Flemming, 7, leader of the boys and girls, 20 in number, was placed on council table by Councilman Stanley Treser and councilmen asked him what he had to say. The little chap stuck his hands in his pockets, looked the lawmakers over and then said:

"Honorable Mayor and Councilmen: I am up here to fight for the dam in the Neshannock river. It's a fine pool. Lots of kids swim there."

Heitz took the floor again, denied the children threw stones and said they had not made unnecessary noise.

He declared the man who objected to the swimming hole being there did not live along Croton avenue.

The discussion was ended when Councilman Genkinger remarked: "Go ahead, children, you can swim" which means that the city will not, judging from their attitude, rip out the swimming dam barrier.

"Dead" Nine Hours

William Dugan (above), of Philadelphia, not only knows what it's like to be alive, but he has memories of how it feels to be "dead" for nine hours. Dugan fell from a boat on Laurel Lake, N. Plan Welcome To Rudy And Bride

Home Town Folks Organizing Spectacular Homecoming For Radio Crooner

(International News Service)

WESTBROOK, Me., July 10.—When Rudy Vallee, radio crooner, "comes home with his bride" the home town folks want to make it the most spectacular home coming the Pine Tree State has ever seen.

An organization was being perfected today to make the welcome to Rudy's bride, the former Miss Fay Webb, musical comedy actress and daughter of Santa Monica, California's police chief, and Westbrook's "favorite son" an event long to be remembered.

Just when the celebration is to be held was not clear. It may be this week-end, if Rudy does not have to go to Atlantic City or it may be the following week-end.

Charles A. Vallee, local druggist, and his wife, over the long distant telephone, invited Rudy and his bride "down east" for a week-end. The news spread around town and the welcome plans began to crystalize.

Persistent reports were current that the bride and groom would fly from New York to Scarboro airport, ten miles from here. Governor William Tudor Gardner may head the list of greeters at the airport. Everybody in town who can ride or walk will be there including the members of the city government and thousands of women from all over New England. Every time a welcome to the "favorite son" of Westbrook has been staged the automobile roads and the railroads have been jammed for hours by throngs, especially women, coming to sing the "Vagabond Lover" and cheer Rudy and throw kisses to him.

Settle Down Today

(International News Service)

New York, July 10.—Rudy Vallee doesn't think his recent marriage to Fay Webb, the former film beauty, is going to impair his popularity with his radio audience, but, nevertheless, it worried him for a long time, he admitted today.

The famous radio crooner and his bride are today settling down to the business of making a home out of their six room apartment over-looking Central Park, after a busy day yesterday spent in receiving thousands upon thousands of messages of congratulations. The telegrams, says Rudy, conclusively prove that all's well among the Vallee fans.

Laughing Jackasses To Make Zoo Merry

(International News Service)

SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 10.—A dozen laughing jackasses from Australia are the latest addition to the city zoo in Balboa park near here.

The laughing creature is not an animal but a species of a kingfisher bird. Its bird name is kookaburro.

"Why this type of kingfisher laughs is a mystery," says Edmund Heller, noted naturalist. "However, its laugh is believed due to the bird's varried diet, which includes garbage, mice, snakes, lizards, birds'eggs, insects and any small living creatures."

LIVESEY TO AID U. S. DIPLOMAT

By PIERCE MILLER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The American government will have ample protection from both technical and diplomatic standpoints at the meeting of the Young plan experts' committee July 17, it was felt in administration circles here today.

Hugh Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium and America's representative at the conference, will have as an aide Frederick Livesey, the state department's authority on German reparations. Acting Secretary of State Castle described Livesey as carrying all the details of reparations in his brain and portfolio.

During the working of the Dawes plan and its successor, the Young plan, it was Livesey who kept the diplomats of the department advised concerning the economic aspects and the highly complicated interlocking agreemnts made at The Hague, when the Young plan was consummated.

Livesey was acting chief of the economic division for more than a year until the recent appointment of Dr. Herbert Feis of New York. The latter was brought in by Secretary of State Stimson because of his knowledge of international economics, particularly in Europe, since the war.

Gibson, among the best trained of this country's diplomatic officers, is an old hand at the European diplomatic game. He has represented this country at previous disarmament conferences at Geneva.

Farmer Fined For Shooting Of Fox

(International News Service)

CENTERVILLE, Md., July 10.—Shooting of a fox running from a pack of hounds has stirred this Eastern Shore section considerably over an antique law, brought to Maryland with the first settlers. Frank McGinness, a farmer, was fined $25 for shooting the fox, under the provisions of the old statute.

McGinness, determined to thresh out propriety of the law, has appealed from the sentence and so started the controversy.

Farmers of the region agree with him the law is silly and not much observed. Fashionable riders to hounds are upholding the old statute.

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, July 10.—"In this corner, James Joseph "Gene" Tunney, retired heavyweight champion and in that corner, Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago."

Thus might a fight announcer broadcast a recent incident in which Tunney snubbed Hutchins and refused to talk to him on the telephone but later hastened to apologize.

Hutchins called Tunney to inquire about the vacation charms of Brioni Island in the Adriatic where Tunney spent his honeymoon with the former Polly Lauder. He was informed: "Mr. Tunney's secretary reports that Mr. Tunney does not talk to Chicago."

Several days later, Tunney called Hutchins and spent 10 minutes in apologizing and 20 minutes in describing Brioni Island where the Hutchins started yesterday.

X-Ray Expert Gives One Hand To Science

(International News Service)

VIENNA, July 10.—Professor Dr. Guido Holzknecht, well-known physician and x-ray expert has had to undergo an amputation of his right hand. He has sacrificed it to his profession, since the operation was made necessary by dangerous x-ray burns which threatened his life.

Professor Holzknecht watched the amputation with the greatest calm. He has ordered the construction of a special artificial hand which is to enable him to continue his scientific work.

Other famous victims of the dangerous x-ray and radium experiments were Reginald Blackall, English scientist who was operated upon fifteen times and got the prize of the Carnegie Fund for Heroes, and M. Demnitroux, the French scientist, who was an assistant of M. and Mme. Curie, the radium discoverers.

Swarming Bees Rout Trainmen

HOQUIAM, Wash., July 10.—Railroad men are experienced in meeting emergencies such as floods, landslides, washouts and wrecks, but when a huge swarm of bees settled upon the railroad yards here and defied all attempts made to oust them, the book of rules did not cover the situation and work completely demoralized for some time.

The bees zoomed down on helpless workmen and disputed the right of way. A section gang fled in terror.

After the defending forces had withdrawn and given the invaders complete control of the yards, a council of war was held. A train crew connected hoses, and staged a counter attack, using jets of live steam as weapons. After a fight of half an hour, the bees decided that the steam was a little too much for them, and they withdrew.

College Education Given High Value

SEATTLE, July 10.—Is a college education for two persons worth $60,000?

That was the valuation put on an education by attorneys who brought suit for $60,000 against Fiorito Brothers, contractors, owners of a truck which collided with a car and caused the death of Edward Schieck.

The attorneys contended that Edna and Fred Schieck, children of the victim, lost their opportunity to get a college education when their father was killed, and should have compensation for being deprived of the schooling.

Edna is 19 and Fred 16.

Canon Roar At Midnight Awakens Boy Scouts For Trek To Haunted House

By SCRIBE JOHN STUMP

CAMP JOHN M. PHILLIPS, July 10.—Scouts at Camp Phillips received a big surprise last night. The cannon boomed at 12 midnight. Sleepy campers were rolled out of bed and informed that a ghost hike lay before them and then began the scramble for shoes and shirts.

A group of half awake boys stumbled along the dark road. When the haunted house was reached Director LeRoi Norton told them of the legend of the house. Then volunteers were asked to enter alone. No one did until Al Stump agreed to go in with any two boys. The brave lads were Bill Brenneman and John Travers. After searching the interior they came out in a marathon spirit. As no one else would go in the boys returned to camp with the prospects of sleeping in an hour longer in the morning.

At breakfast many reasons were given for the noises in the house.

A golf tourney was held during the afternoon. The winner was Carl Zeigler. Jack Higgins came in second and Jim Higgins third. Boat teams practiced for the race to be held Friday. Personal and hut inspection was won by the hut led by Jim Kirkpatrick. This hut made a perfect score. Huts led by Herb Christman and John Stump tied for second place with 98 per cent. Tom Rambo's hut came in third with 96 per cent. During the past week there has been a daily rivalry to win the banner.

The tennis singles championship is being played off. Dick Hamilton is in the lead and threatens to take over the championship. Evening saw the beginning of a game of "Enemy In Camp" Four secret enemies are chosen. A flag is put up in plain sight. It is the job of the enemy to capture it and to run with it to the officers' hut. The enemies, Tom Rambo, Herb Christman, Jim Kirkpatrick and J. Howard Swick, Jr., did succeed in doing this.

All day today was Campers' Day and the Boy Scouts were expected to change places with the camp staff members. Officers chosen by the group will be in full charge throughout the day.

BEES ROUT POLICE
(International News Service)

DETROIT.—Cops aren't afraid of gangsters, bandits or human terrorists—but bees, that's different. Detroit police recently suffered their first major rout when a dozen officers were put to instant and abject flight. Startled motorists halted in amazement at the sight of police officers running out doors or climbing through windows of the precinct station house. It was the better part of valor for a swarm of bees had picked the desk sergeant's blotter for a place.

But if there is no bull market, how do you account for political speeches.

Poison Ivy Treatments Pointed Out

Captain Smith Gives First Account Of Venomous Weed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In writing about poison ivy a few weeks ago I mentioned only treatment by serum and ether soap. Several correspondents have been kind enough to send me other methods of treatment which are simple, and apparently effective, and as the subject is a timely one at this season, I will discuss it further.

Our first account of poison ivy comes from Captain John Smith. Whether his actual experience with it was the result of a necking party with Pocahontas in the Virginia woods, I do not know, but this is how he describes the results:

"The poisonous weed being in shape but little different from our English yvie: but being touched causeth redness, itchings, and lastly blysters, the which, however, after a while they passe awaye of themselves without further harme; yet because for the time they are somewhat painefull and in aspect dangerous, it hath gotten itselfe an ill name, although questionlesse of noe very ill nature."

Several years ago Dr. James B. McNair, at the University of Chicago, started out to find the active poisonous substance in poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac, and after considerable chemical work he obtained a gummy brown substance which was very poisonous.

The most practical part of his work was the discovery that iron would neutralize the poison of this substance. Salts of lead and zinc, which have been used as poison ivy preventives for a long time, had a very weak effect in neutralization compared to the iron.

The iron preparation to use is ferric of iron chloride—a 5 per cent solution in half water, half alcohol mixture—if used freely on the hands or face before or immediately after going into a region known or suspected of having poison ivy, will prevent or stop the eruption. The remedy is cheap, the ingredients easily obtained at any drug store, and its preparation "requires no more skill than stirring sugar into a cup of coffee."

Dr. George D. Fuller, a botanist who was tormented with ivy poisoning so that he could hardly go out on field study with his classes, recommends the iron treatment highly. He has a modification of the ferric chloride, preferring another iron salt, ferrous sulphate, which he puts in solution in water at about any strength up to short of saturation. The sulphate solution is cheaper and keeps better than the chloride solution. The method of use and results are the same.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

W. C. B.: "I hope to be situated this summer so that it will be possible for me to take sun baths, completely exposing the body. Kindly advise me as to frequency, length of exposure, etc. Do you believe sun baths will help to cause a quicker comeback from the prostration due to a serious operation on the appendix or gallbladder?"

Answer: The treatment should be begun very gradually. The Rollier technique is as follows: "Exposure always begins with the feet and legs The thighs, abdomen and thorax follow . Only a few minutes' exposure is allowed each part on the first day. The treatment is given daily or every other day, depending on the amount of skin change. Finally, the patient is able to expose the whole body to the sun for several hours daily." This treatment is certainly efficacious in any forms of debility and convalescence.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Inspectors Will Check Apiaries

HARRISBURG, July 10.—The State inspection of apiaries which is designed to check on the housing of bees and the presence of destructive diseases, will be carried on in 21 counties this summer according to an announcement from the bureau of plant industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

With favorable weather, this work will be completed on schedule so that by this fall practically the entire Commonwealth will have been freed of illegal box hives as well as many infections of costly bee diseases.

Re-inspection of apiaries found violating the State law last summer is now about completed in Adams, Bradford, Jefferson and Lehigh counties, according to H. B. Kirk, chief aspiary inspector, who reports splendid co-operation from beekeepers in transferring bees to modern movable frame hives and in burning the old box hives.

The burning of all hives infected with American foul brood—one of the most serious of all bee diseases—is being reccommended by the inspectors.

The following counties are included in the schedule of inspection this summer: Allegheny, Armstrong, Berks, Blair, Bucks, Butler, Erie, Franklin, Juniata, Lancaster, Mifflin, Montgomery, Montour, Northumberland, Perry, Snyder, Union, Wayne, Westmoreland, and York.

All persons in these counties will greatly assist the work if they report the fact that they have bees, to their county agricultural agent or directly to the bureau of plant industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

WE ARE LENDING

A helping hand to the people of New Castle and vicinity, doing our level best to save you money on quality provisions. We have not overlooked the cleanliness and sanitation end of it. These are two very important factors in preserving our health, especially during this extremely hot weather. We have added Mr. William Kerber to our personnel. Mr. Kerber is one of the old-timers and knows the provision game. He learned the business under the tutelage of his father, Mr. Philip Kerber, a pioneer of New Castle. He is efficient at making meat loaves, sausages, puddings and bologna. He has been in the country all week. We feel that we can also extend a helping hand to the farmers by buying everything we can direct from them (and believe me, they sure need it) as long as they can produce quality. Mr. Kerber has been successful in getting a nice lot of fat, plump calves and lambs. They're just like butter balls. A roast or stew would be a treat.

We have brought 300 yearlings and broiler in from our farm. They are all full of pep and in perfect health. Our customers have accepted our method of handling poultry away beyond our expectations and we are striving all the time to better our service. You know you can see our chickens in their sanitary coops. You pick 'em out and we dress 'em in a jiffy free of charge. Billy Burrows is still pegging away in the grocery and vegetable department for you, and believe me, he has his eagle eye open all the time to see that there is nothing reaches you that is not of the highest quality. Hall Attempts Non-Stop Flight

Hops Off From Los Angeles For Straight Flight To New York City

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 10.—James Hall, who recently made an epochal flight from Canada to Mexico, hopped off today on a non-stop flight to New York City.

L. W. Paxon accompanied Hall. Paxon will tune the motor of the plane of Miss Laura Ingalls, of New York and St. Louis, Mo., who will attempt a New York to Paris solo flight.

Lone Heath Hen Still In Land Of Pilgrims

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The heath hen, the last bird of a tribe that fed the Pilgrims, is still alive on Martha's Vineyard, Mass., the American Forestry association announces.

Though his death has been reported several times, the lone bird was seen again recently in his traditional "booming" grounds.

The association has been searching for two years for a mate for this "last of the species" and this lone hen has been returning yearly to this spot in Massachusetts cackling and tooting in a vain effort to attract one of its kind.

Among its worst enemies are the cat, the hawk and the owl. These three have caused the bird to become all but extinct.

Steel Tonnage Shows Decrease

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 10.—Unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel Corporation as of June 30 showed a decrease of 141,129 tons to a total of 3,479,323 tons, it was announced today.

This compares with unfilled tonnage of 3,620,452 tons on May 31, 3,897,729 on April 30, 3,995,330 on March 31, and 3,968,064 on June 30, 1930.

King Sticks to Side Crease

The prerogatives of royalty and women appear to include wearing what they want to whenever they want to. Here's King George, for instance, still sticking to trousers pressed on the sides instead of down the front like most mortals. True, too, the gray bowler hat is probably no more pronounced than the royal trousers. The king is shown shaking hands with D. R. Jardine, captain of the English cricket team, during a lull in the England-New Zealand match.

Gang's Torture Victims

State troopers, deputy sheriffs and police were rushed to Southampton, L. I., ultra-fashionable Summer colony of New York society, following an outbreak of a bootleggers' war in which five young men were kidnaped and two of them fiendishly tortured with redhot irons applied to their faces and the soles of their feet. Jacob Antilety, 19, (left) and Thomas Farrell, 26, were the victims of the cruelty of the gangsters, who used a scorching hot potato masher to sear the youths.

Grant Permission To Open Mercer Street

Council met in the city building today and granted a permit to the William Clark company to excavate at 1006 North Mercer street where a house is being built. The section excavated will be repaved by the company under the supervision of the City Engineer, Frank Miller and Superintendent of Sewers, Carmi Glover.

Public Benefactors

The kind-hearted thug who fills his gas-pipe with feathers to make the blow lighter.

You can tell the great man in a news reel. He's the one who reminds you of a small boy forced to show off before company.

Tiny Mathematical "Geniuses" Developed By Unique Method

By RICHARD RANDOLPH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

DENVER, Colo., July 10.—Mathematical "geniuses" are made, not born. Witness the performances of six-year old children working—or rather playing—with fractions, radicals and square roots!

Rev. John Joseph Donnelly is developing some revolutionary methods in the science of teaching, and getting some phenomenal results in the classrooms of St. Francis de Sales School here.

On the blackboard in the first grade room he writes two numbers on the board, thus:

318,227,249

"Add them," he says. Instantly a score of tiny hands are raised. The answer is ready, arrived at by mental calculation in a matter of mere seconds.

"Subtract," comes the order. Again the answer is ready in a few seconds.

"You buy 55 articles," the teacher says. "Each costs 55 cents. How much have you spent?" Almost instantly a chorus of childish voices replies "$30.25."

The members of the class take their places. Thirty knee-high and zealous interest step to the board.

They go through the multiplication tables in a simple algebraic form as: X equals 19; X squared equals 361. Then the question:

"James has a number of marbles, Jack has twice as many as James. Bill has three times as many as James, plus four. How many has each?"

Figures fly across the blackboard. The problem is reduced to an algebraic equation. The solution is arrived at in a few seconds.

Not all theanswers are correct. Enough of them are right to show that the children have grasped the problem, however.

So much for the first grade class.

Elaine Becker, nine, a fourth grader, enters the room.

Four four-figure numbers are written on the board to be multiplied by four other four-figure numbers. The answers are on the board in 14 seconds.

A number in the billions is called for.

"Write it backwards," says the teacher.

In just as much time as it takes to write the number the transposition is made.

"For almost two years," Father Donnelly explains, "Elaine has received no coaching, but I believe she is quite as competent to take higher mathematics as I would be. In formula work, I am not in her class."

Next, Margaret Weadick was called. She is a sixth grade student.

"Express the functions of a circle in terms of the other functions," It is done in less than half a minute.

The explanation, I ask.

"Mental discipline has aroused and is holding the interest of the children. The system is designed to develop the will, the memory and the reasoning powers of the youngsters," is the reply.

"The child is eager to believe in himself, and encouragement, recognition and suggestion will soon strengthen his confidence and intensify his interest. To force defeat upon him must weaken interest and awaken antagonism. If I had to choose between telling a child he was a bone-head and hitting him with a rock, I would use the rock. It would be less brutal."

Confesses Killing Man Who Is Alive

Believing He Killed Man During Exchange Of Blows, Miola Man Gives Himself Up

(International News Service)

CLARION, Pa., July 10.—Although he was "supposed" to have been murdered and a man gave himself up to police and admitted the killing, William Shaul, 38, was very much alive today and joshed over a story emanating from Clarksburg, W. V.

There, Fred D. Frame, 45, former resident of Miola, near here, walked into heardquarters and declared "I murdered a man." He named his victim as William Shaul. Authorities began an immediate check with Clarion officials—and it was first ascertained that Shaul was not dead, but decidedly alive.

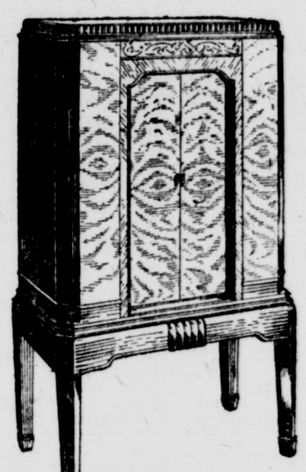

How Frame happened to have the mistaken notion that he killed someone was then disclosed. During a quarrel months ago he and Shaul had exchanged blows. Shaul fell. Someone cried, "Now you've killed him." Frame, believing him, immediately turned and fled and was not heard of until he walked into the Clarksburg, W. Va., headquarters.

Burglar Is Inventor Of "Pickproof" Lock

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Calif., July 10.—Revising and old truism: "set a lockpicker to make a pickproof lock."

Harold Marks, burglar, has invented a lock he says he himself couldn't pick unless he knew the secret of its operation.

The lock is so designed that a key will not enter it, once it is locked, unless a secret word is first spelled out by whirling a lettered dial attached to the lock, much as a number is dialed on a modern telephone.

Marks is serving a term of from five years to life for a burglary committed in San Diego.

Urges Control Of Chain Store Encroachment

BLAMES DEPRESSION ON CREDIT MONOPOLY

(International News Service)

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., July 10.—Drastic federal regulation of all corporations, engaging in interstate commerce, is necessary to save the independent business man of America from ruin at the hands of chain store monopolies, Senator Brookhart (R) of Iowa, declared here today in a speech to the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

Brookhart pleaded for an organization of independent business men, manufacturers and consumers to fight the growth of chain store systems. He declared the chain stores were sending the "local merchant into bankruptcy and destroying the civil life of the small communities".

The Iowan held that the greatest cause of the current depression was the control of credits by a few banking institutions in New York. He said the New York banking groups not only controlled railroad monopolies, utility and power monopolies but dominated the manufacturing and chain store monopolies.

"These combinations that control credit, together with the deflation policy of the Federal Reserve banks are 65 per cent of the present cause of the agricultural and mercantile depression," he added.

Fight For Lives

"The retail merchants are in a fight for their lives. They cannot win alone. Their fight is both political and economic. They must join with their customers for the control of corporations, of transportation, of excess profits, of credit and of marketing, cooperation is the word."

Brookhart suggested cooperative banks, similar to the organization established years ago in Rochdale, England. He said the British cooperative now had a banking reserve of $4,000,000,000 and was impregnable to all attacks from private capital.

"It was Andrew Jackson, who discovered the evils of credit control in the old National bank and destroyed them in the greatest and most successful political fight in the history of our country," Brookhart added. "He alone of all our presidents never compromised and never surrendered to financial dictation. We need another Jackson now to combat this restored and rejuvenated menace."

Brookhart urged citizens and small merchants to inform the Federal Trade commission about any monopolistic acts by chain stores. He said the commission's inquiry into chain stores would not be completed before September. He added that the inquiry would show that in 1921 but 4 per cent of all sales were transacted in chain stores but that in 1928, sixteen percent of all business was conducted by the same stores. In 1920, he said there were 27,000 chain stores but in 1930, the number had grown to 70,000.

"The farmers, the laborers and the independent business men, whether wholesalers, retailers or manufacturers, are outside the citadel of monopoly," Brookhart declared. "They owe it to themselves to unite in a common cause and destroy this fortress of economic oppression."

Gives Part Of First Crop From His Red Cross Garden To Salvation Army

Appreciation of the assistance given him last winter for himself and family was expressed in a very substantial manner this morning by Charles Marker of Sheep Hill, when he presented to the Salvation Army some of his first crop of beans, which he is raising from the Red Cross garden seed, which was distributed earlier in the summer to those out of employment or in need of assistance.

Mr. Marker is deeply appreciative of the assistance given him and due to unemployment, the only thing that he could do to adequately express his appreciation for the kindness extended him last winter, was to give some of the beans, which will be canned and held in storage by the Salvation Army until needed in the fall and winter.

Mexico Starts Campaign To Popularize National Sports

(International News Service)

MEXICO CITY, July 10.—An intensive campaign "to put the stamp of nationalism" on indoor and outdoor activities has been inaugurated under the sponsorship of the Culture and Social Committee of the capitol.

Irked by the prominent foreign influence apparent in practically all public affairs of social and educational value, the nationalization enthusiasts adopted a resolution urging the government to cooperate in a countrywide campaign based on the following fundamentals:

1—Popularize distinctly national sports such as fronton; a combination of handball and basketball. In conjunction with that, minimize foreign diversions such as golf, baseball and American football.

2—Prohibit motion pictures in the foreign tongue, allowing only those presented in correct Spanish. (At present the films of American origin are offered in the English language for the most part, with printed translations of Spanish appearing jointly on the screen.)

3—Encouraging native fairs characterized by native customs.

Strictly enforce the existing law requiring all advertising signs to be printed in Spanish.

Request civil departments to see to it henceforth all civic activities bear "the stamp of true Mexican nationalism, eliminating such activities tending to alienate patriotism."

Americans Get London Court Gowns In Paris

By ALICE LANGELIER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, July 10.—Court gowns coming from Paris dressmakers and worn by Americans in London are quite the most important things on the fashion map these days. They are extremely varied in color as well as design and tissue and will fall in most favorably with the evening mode for summer.

Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago has worn a white and silver lame for her gown and train. She is thinking some of having the train lined with golden velvet and trimmed with sable.

Miss Edith Martin, of Philadelphia, granddaughter of Cyrus Curtis, selected for her presentation at St. James' a white satin gown from Worth's. It has a v-shaped decollete with white celphone flowers on the bodice marking the high waistline and skirt which is full by reason of vertical tucks and a draped effect. Her courttrain is of white satin lame and trimmed with white gardenias.

A soft medium-blue georgette has been chosen by Mrs. Emerson Howe of Washington, D. C. one side of the bodice is in a lighter shade and is embroidered. Her train is of blue velvet of the same shade lined with georgette.

Mrs. Henry Symes Lehr who makes her home in Paris and who was the former Elizabeth Drexel of Philadelphia, decided to wear silver lame with a deep v-shaped decolletage slightly draped in front. The gown has a high waist-line and the front of the skirt is tucked to form fullness in the panel. The train is of lame lined with white velvet.

Mrs. N. B. Gulbenkian of New York, chose a soft rose pink goergette with the train of matching pink velvet lined with goergette and embroidered with the same bead motifs found on the bodice.

Ten Rules For Good Health By "Artie" McGovern

Sunshine And Fresh Air Are Held As Essentials

In the following article, the nineteenth of a series of talks to the readers of The New Castle News, "Artie" McGovern, famous physical trainer and director of McGovern's Gymnasium in New York, lays down some simple rules for health building.

By "ARTIE" McGOVERN
(Written Exclusively For and Copyright By International News Service, 1931)

NEW YORK, July 10—There is no one who does not desire good health. Business and social life depend upon it. Nevertheless, many of us neglect to take even the simplest precautions to preserve good health. Just as there are laws governing and limiting our civil and moral conduct, so there are rules for the maintenance of our physical well-being. These rules I have grouped under ten headings and they might be called the

"Ten Commandments of Good Health"

1. Take from ten to twenty minutes of systematic exercises every morning before breakfast, according to your general physical condition.
2. After exercise take a warm bath followed by a tepid shower.
3. Drink two glasses of water, before breakfast.
4. Breakfast should be carefully selected. We are too prone to consider this meal as unimportant but the lapse of time between dinner and breakfast leaves the stomach entirely empty, rested, and ready for a substantial meal.
5. Spend at least one hour in the open air every day. Sunshine and fresh air are most essential to keep the body in good condition.
6. Get enough sleep and rest.
7. Eat normal meals and eat them at regular hours each day. Simple meals are essential and it is well to remember that we might far better err on the side of eating too little than too much.
8. Devote some part of each day to recreation. A healthy body is a happy one. Periods of despondency react with harmful effect upon the glands and organs which will function normally if the mind is kept contented and happy.
9. At least six glasses of water should be taken every day, preferably between meals.
10. Practice moderation in every activity—in working, playing, eating, drinking, and in every phase of our daily lives.

MRS. HOOVER TO VISIT AKRON

First Lady To Christen Zeppelin August 8—President Unable To Attend

AKRON, July 10.—Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the president, will christen the new navy dirigible Akron, August 8, by releasing the door of a cage from which white pigeons will swing into the air.

The ceremony will be a new one for this lighter-than-air center. Blimps built here always have been christened by the breaking of a bottle of liquid air on the control cabin. Sponsors of airships always have gloves to preclude any possibility of receiving a frozen hand while handling the liquid air. In the case of the first lady it was decided here that not even the minor risk should be taken.

She is expected to arrive here on a special train. The president has found it impossible to attend.

As the Akron is christened it will be released from its moorings and floated, just as an ocean liner is released from the dry dock. The Akron will not leave the dock until the navy undertakes the trial flights sometime later this summer.

To protect the public and the ship during the trial flights the corporation is constructing a fence around the dock 18,000 feet long.

Birdies Have Classy Bath At Eastbrook

All the little birdies who nest in the trees around Camp East Brook, the Y. W. C. A. camp for girls, are just about the cleanest and happiest birds in the country.

The reason? They have been equipped with the prettiest, nicest and most modern bird bath in existence. No puddles for them. No, sir! When Saturday night comes along the mama, papa and birdlets whiz over to the attractive bird bath located between the camp dining room and the tennis courts, and give their wings a thorough dipping.

This snappy little bath was erected by the Benjamin Franklin junior high school Girls Reserve club members, who launched the camping season at East Brook this year. It is built of the size of stones used in the gateway to Calvin Coolidge's summer home, remember? Well, anyway, the stones are that size and kind of roundish. They were cemented together, one on top of another and form a pyramid about two feet high.

On top of the pyramid is the bird bath. The little tub is given fresh water every time it rains.

Yes, and the birds can often be heard to be "Singin' in the Bath Tub."

POTATO GROWERS WIL STAGE BIG EXPOSITION

Pennsylvania potato growers will gather at State College, August 24 to 26, for their second big exposition in three years, according to L. T. Denniston, plant pathology extension specialist of the Pennsylvania State college, who is executive secretary of the exposition.

Many features of the 1929 exposition, which attracted 5,000 visitors to State College, have been combined with new plans to make this one of the largest educational exhibits ever attempted by the Pennsylvania Potato Growers association, Denniston announces.

Production, marketing and consumption of potatoes will be covered in the program. Demostrations, exhibits and talks will be used to tell the three-sided story of potatoes in Pennsylvania.

Morning programs will be devoted to talks by prominent speakers, among whom are Dr. O. E. Baker of the United States department of agriculture and Dr. F. P. Weaver, head of the department of agricultural economics, State College.

In the afternoons, visitors will view the machinery displays, field demonstrations and education exhibits. More than a dozen acres have been set aside by the school of agriculture for plowing, seedbed preparation, planting, cultivating, weeding, spraying and digging demonstrations.

Evening entertainment will include a banquet for 300 Bushel club members and their wives, 4-H boys' club stunts, a rural play contest and a rural choir contest.

Invitations to attend the exposition have been extended to potato growers in other states, especially in those states visited by Pennsylvania growers on tours in recent years.

PASTURES SAVE GRAIN AND PROMOTE GROWTH

A hog on pasture is a healthier and more profitable pig than one in a dry lot.

Experiment station tests and hog pasture demonstrations have proved that about one-half pound of grain is saved for every pound of pork produced where hogs are on good pasture. This means 100 pounds of grain saved in the feeding a 200-pound market hog.

If there is no natural shade, such as trees, in the pasture, temporary shade can be provided by setting posts in the ground, placing a scaffolding of poles or boards on them and putting a cover of straw, corn fodder, or similar material about two feet thick over it. A few poles laid on top will prevent the wind from blowing off the cover material.

Where no stream is available, fresh water should be supplied in some form of sanitary waterer so that the hogs can have access to it at all times. Hogs require a large amount of water in order to make rapid gains.

During the summer lice and other external parasites multiply rapidly. The use of crude oil or oil drained from automobile crank cases is recommended. Coal oil can be applied by bunching the hogs and sprinkling the oil over their backs with a sprinkling can, or by using a stiff brush to shake the oil on them. Keep the hogs confined in the pen for a short time and the oil will be spread over their bodies by rubbing against each other.

Although the price of pork is low at this time, the market hogs should be kept on full feed in order to make rapid gains, which are more profitable than slow gains, and in order to have the hogs ready for marketing in early fall when the price usually is better than any other time.

PLANT VEGETABLES NOW FOR FALL AND WINTER

Late planted vegetables in the home garden will provide a supply for fall use and winter storage. Many crops can be planted after the early vegetables have been harvested, which permits the gardener to get maximum use of the ground.

Several small plantings of leaf lettuce, spinach and kohl rabi may be sown until September. Endive requires a longer season and should be planted by the middel of July. Chinese cabbage does best when planted about July 15.

Celery is most exacting in its requirements. Fertile soil, good plants and sufficient moisture will eliminate many failures. Planting on level ground is better than in a deep trench. A mulch of strawy chicken manure when the plants are about five inches high will help.

Liberal space should be allotted to the planting of root crops for winter storage. These include rutabagas, turnips, beets, carrots and winter radishes.

Dwarf snap beans and sweet corn may be planted in mid-summer for early fall maturity.

FLY PREVENTION AIDS PROTECTION OF HEALTH

Flies are responsible for spreading the organisms producing a number of serious diseases of humans, and they are particularly associated with the transmission of typhoid fever.

Flies spread diseases by carrying germs from places of filth or disease to foods or liquids used by man. Adult flies are capable of transporting disease-producing germs on the various external parts of their bodies as well as in their alimentary canals.

Destruction of the egg and larval stages is one of the most effective means of fighting flies. Solution of the problem is especially difficult in the country where outbuildings are unprotected or manure piles accumulate outside stables. Many times flies cannot be combated in their breeding places. In these instances attention must be directed toward control of the full-grown flies or adults . A number of different methods have been suggested as means of control. Among these are trapping of adults, screening buildings or manure pits, use of poison baits, treatment of manure, use of poisonous insecticides or contact sprays, and sanitary practices in the disposal of materials on which eggs are deposited and the maggots feed.

Circular 140, Fly Prevention, published by the agricultural extension service of the Pennsylvania State college, describes these methods in detail.

OLD FERTILITY PLOTS SHOW WHAT SOIL NEEDS

Phosphoric acid is the first limiting element in the Hagerstown loam soil, a summary of the 50-year tests on the old fertility plots at the Pennsylvania State college shows. When used alone, or in any combination, it has resulted in a substantial increase in yield.

Nitrogen has been the least important plant food element in the rotation used in this experiment. Although potash did not increase yields when supplied alone, it was used with profit with phosphoric acid, and with nitrogen and phosphoric acid.

Complete fertilizer, except as soil acidity was a factor, gave as good yields as manure. Where manure was applied at the rates of six, eight and ten tons an acre in alternate years, the greatest return per ton was obtained from the lightest application.

Both burnt lime and ground limestone gave marked increases in yield over the untreated plots. While the yeilds were better with lime than without, lime did not maintain fertility.

MEETINGS TO BE HELD AT BARLEY DEMONSTRATIONS

Barley, unlike wheat and oats, cannot be left until the straw is entirely ripe before it is cut. It should be cut when the straw is about one-half ripe, or when the kernels are in the stiff dough stage.

The loss is great when you wait until the straw is entirely ripe. Step into the barley field when the straw is about one-half ripe and examine the kernels . If you find them in the stiff dough stage—that is barley cutting time.

A series of meetings has been arranged to be held next week at which time this and other phases of barley growing will be discussed. These meetings will be held at farms where barley is now growing, in some fields two or three varieties can be seen. The schedule for the meetings is as follows:

Tuesday, July 14, at 7 p. m. eastern standard time at the farm of R. J. Drake, Scott township.

Wednesday, July 15, at 1 p. m. eastern standard time at the farm of Charles Mershimer, Slippery Rock township; 7 p. m. eastern standard time at the farm of N. E. Sampson, Wilmington township.

Thursday, July 16, at 1 p. m. eastern standard time at the farm of James W. Gilmore, Little Beaver township; 7 p. m. eastern standard time at the home of J. V. Aiken, Perry township.

Friday, July 17, at 1 p. m. eastern standard time at the farm of Martin Wimer, Washington township; 7 p. m. eastern standard time at the farm of Harold Bradley, Pulaski township.

We appreciate that this is a busy season, but these meetings will not be lengthy so that you will not be kept away from your work for any great length of time. If you are now growing barley or anticipate growing it next year there will be something of interest and instruction for you at any of these meetings.

LATENT HEAT ENERGY REDUCED TO ACCURATE SCALE OF MEASUREMENT

By Arthur DeV. Carpenter.

Solar heat engaged in melting ice is known as latent heat. The definite unit of heat energy that has been adopted for measuring evaporation work done in the Fahrenheit scale is: The amount of heat required to raise one gram of water one degree. On this scale the latent heat required to convert ice to the liquid state is 143 heat units; to change water to a gaseous or vapor state requires 966 heat units. Of course the work of evaporation to convert water to vapor from a lower temperature than one degree F. would require a larger number of heat units. To change a gram of water from 32 degrees F. to vapor requires 1,092 heat units.

INSECT ENEMIES

Constant vigilance against insect enemies is one of the important duties of the gardener. Sprays and dusts are his weapons. But for effective use of these chemicals, entomologists of the Bureau of Entomology point out, the gardener must determine which of the two big classes the enemy insects belong to—whether they are chewing insects or sucking insects.

Chewing insects bite off and swallow bits of the plant tissue. Sucking insects have mouth parts that pierce the plant tissue and suck out the life juices of the plant.

The kind of insecticide to use depends on which of these two habits of feeding the insect pursues.

Just a word of caution to the gardener in the use of sprays. He should always have a good reason for spraying. Insecticides are seldom if ever beneficial to the plant itself. Improperly prepared they are sometimes too strong for tender foliage and delicate flowers, and injure them.

Sometimes it is difficult to control the insect and at the same time not injure the beauty of the blooms.

Insecticides are beneficial only in that they remove the destructive pests with least damage to the plants. It is best not to spray unless the insect is a real danger or is caught actually damaging the plant.

If there are only a few plants to protect, it is preferable to pick off the infested leaves or to remove and kill the insects by hand.

"R" Months For Oysters A Fallacy

Survey Shows Popular Sea Food Sold Year Round In Many Places

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The belief that oysters should be eaten during the "R" months only is a widespread popular fallacy, according to J. M. Lemon, associate technologist in the Commerce Departments Bureau of Fisheries, who has just completed a study of the market for fresh oysters in founteen cities of the United States.

Information was obtained by personal interviewing 127 dealers and 1,393 housewives in Washington, Baltimore, Denver, Oaklahoma City, Kansas City, Des Moines, St. Paul, St. Louis, Chicago, Buffalo, Columbus, Chattanooga, Birmingham, and Atlanta.

As a possible reason for the popular fallacy that oysters are not good in the summer, Mr. Lemon pointed out that 80 or 100 years ago methods of transportation and handling were not advanced to the modern level, and that as a consequence oysters were liable to spoilation.

Oysters are found in every seacoast State in the country, Mr. Lemon said, and a commercial fishery for them is conducted in all these States except Maine and New Hampshire. According to recent figures the production of oyster meats now amount to about 156,000 000 pounds annually, valued at approximately $17,000,000 to the commercial oysterman.

Suggests Stevens Children Be Given Important Part In Washington Celebration

An article from the New York Evening Journal of Wednesday, July 1, will be of interest to New Castle persons inasmuch as it has to do with the kin-folk of Mrs. Mary Clendenin Ward, who died at the family home on North Mercer street last winter.

The Mrs. Stevens referred to in the article is a daughter of Mrs. Ward:

"In Mondays Column, in which I told of George Washington's descent from King Solomon, I stated that the famous Stevens family of Castle Point was distantly related by marriage with the Washingtons. There is one branch of the Stevens clan, however, which is descended not only from the family of the immortal George but also from his wife, the celebrated Martha.

I refer to Mr. Basil Stevens, of Montclair, N. J., who is one of my associates in the Society of Colonial Wars. This gentleman is the son of the very elegant Mrs. Edwin A. Stevens, who once lived in "The Castle" at Castle Point, Hoboken. This lady, who is now visiting in Virginia, has been termed the most aristocratically-born women in the United States, for she is the great-great-grand daughter of Betty Washington, who was a full sister of our first President, and she is likewise descended from the beautiful Nellie Custis, Martha Washington's granddaughter by her first husband, who was adopted by the Father of His Country. And the fair Nellie was wedded to Lawrence Lewis, the favorite nephew of George Washington.

Mr. Basil Stevens married Miss Helen Ward, and they are the parents of two children—Emily Custis Lewis Stevens, called "Emmy Lew" for short and Edwin A. Stevens, 4th. It would be a splendid idea if these young descendants of the Washington family were given conspicuous parts in the celebration of the Washington jubilee which is to be held next year, to commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of America's greatest hero.

How my telephone rang yesterday! The story of Washington's descent from Solomon having evoked widespread interest. For the benefit of one of my interrogators, let me state that Washington's Huguenot ancestor was Captain Nicholas Martian."

Penn Benefits Through Requests

Over Two Million Dollars Left University During Past Year

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, July 10,—Gifts and bequests amounting to $2,231,356 were made to the University of Pennsylvania during the 1930-1931 fiscal year, and the total amount contributed to the University Fund since its establishment in 1925 has reached $17,543,343, it was announced here by Thomas S. Gates, president of the university.

The outstanding gift to the fund during the last fiscal year, President Gates said, was one of more than a million dollars from Cyrus H. K. Curtis, of Philadelphia. Other notable gifts were contributed by the Rockefeller Foundation, of New York, the Julius Rosenwald Fund, the General Education Board and the Carnegie Corporation.

Music Banned In Greensburg Jail

(International News Service)

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 10,—What music inmates of the Westmoreland county jail here enjoy in future will be made by themselves—and it had better not be too loud.

Music in the jail house has come under the ban that Louis Hemler and Troy Golden filed the bars of their cells and escaped from the calaboose under cover of a loud radio set, operated in the prisoners "bull pen."

LOOKING BACK IN NEW CASTLE

Recent story relative to the tremors that startled the residents of the South Side back in the nineties, when the steel plant started operations and were finally explained by the discovery of the fact that a strata of quicksand underlaid the mill and South Side district, causing the strange happenings in the homes of that section of the city, has resulted in a desire to know just how this situation was overcome. When it was finally determined as to the cause of the strange happenings in the home and also for the purpose of improving and prolonging the life of the heavy rolls and engines that sent the tremors through the strata of quicksand, the engineers of the steel plant got busy. New and heavy concrete foundations were placed under them, being sunk to a depth that insured the durability of the rolls and engines for a greater period of years and also did away with the tremors that rocked beds, and chairs, caused pictures to hang at all angles on the walls of the homes and sent the dishes in the homes clattering and smashing to the floor. Since these modern improvements have been made there has been a cessation of the peculiar antics caused in the earlier days of the plant. Had these peculiar happenings caused by the engines and rolls of the steel plant occurred a hundred years previous to the time they did, there would no doubt have been some little tendency to believe that the district was bewitched, but fortunately it occurred in modern, enlightened times and science effected a remedy.

Connellsville Man Saves $600 Bank Roll After Gypsies Had Bewitched Him

(International News Service)

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., July 10—Harry L. Brothers broke a "spell" laid upon him by two gypsies, he told authorities here, just in time to save $600.

According to Brothers, the gypsies cast a spell over him and caused him to draw the $600 from a Scottdale bank and place it in a safety deposit box. The "spell, also called for mortgaging his farm and turning the proceeds over to the gypsies to utilize in creating a fortune for Brothers, he said.

The "spell" was broken while he was reading a newspaper, Brothers told authorities who took the gypsies, Joe Marks and Mary Warsaul, into custody to question them for a spell.

Explains Reason For Backing Plan To Build Hospital

HARRISBURG, July 10,—Evidencing a thorough recognition of a long felt need in the field of mental health in this state, Governor Gifford Pinchot today issued a statement explaining at length his reasons for the recent approval of a bill providing for acceptance from the University of Pittsburgh, a site for a state psychiatric hospital and appropriating $25,000 for preparation of preliminary plans.

The Governor cited the fact that other states, have recognized the need for such hospitals and he said that Pennsylvania should no longer lag in preparing for the establishment of such important facilities.

Phychiatric hospitals of the nature proposed in the bill approved by the Governor it not intended to relieve the general mental hospitals of the responsibility of being prepared to treat all kinds of mental patients he said. Further outlining the purposes of a State pyschiatric hospital the Governor said that the general mental hospitals should be equipped to serve completely their particular districts. The State Psychiatric hospital, however is designed to be a center of leadership for the training of physicians, nurses and other personnel; for research and for the intensive study and vigorous treatment of selected groups of patients.

The psychiatric hospital should offer courses for physicians nurses and other workers, the Governor said. While such training should be made a requisite for promotion in State service in the State owned hospitals, it is not intended that the nurse be confined to such candidates alone. Practicing physicians as well as internes in training would be eligible for the course.

The general mental hospital is primarily engaged in care and treatment of large numbers of patients and research in necessarily conducted under adverse conditions the Governor said. The State Psychiatric hospital would be limited in the number of beds to facilitate research, but there would be an extensive outpatient clinic for the treatment and diagnosis of borderline cases where thousands of persons would come each year. The hospital will be under the supervision of the State Department of Welfare.

Dancing, Dining Do Not Mix, Says Health Expert

Hard On Digestion McGovern Warns Those Who Indulge

By ARTHUR McGOVERN
(Written Exclusively For and Copyright by International News Service, 1931)

NEW YORK, July 10.—From the standpoint of morals I never could see anything particularly wicked about dancing—social "reformers" standpoint of health, there is much to be said against it, especially as it is indulged in nowadays.

I refer to the popular dinner-dancing, which, as its name implies, is nothing more or less than a combination of fox-trot and table d'hote, with disastrous results for the digestion.

By no means do I wish to convey the idea that dancing is not good exercise. Quite emphatically, it is. But it must be done intelligently or it can be the means of definite harm.

As an exercise it should never be indulged in less than two hours after eating. But the picture we see in most of our popular hotel dining rooms, night clubs, and wayside inns is one that horrifies the person really interested in good health. It would seem that a quiet, peaceful dinner after a hard day's work is unthinkable. One would believe that mere eating were a waste of time.

So, the dinner-dance became the remedy and now we see young couples—and old ones too—ordering hurriedly as the orchestra tunes up, then dashing on the floor for a dance. Returning to the table for a few moments the first course is served and perhaps right in the middle of it, the music starts up again. A hurried swallow and again—on with the dance!

And so it goes with one-steps fox-trots, and tangoes dyspeptically sandwiched between oysters, steaks and pie. What chance has a person's digestion?

On the other hand dancing can be beneficial not only as an exercise, but as a delightful form of relaxation and recreating. Eat your dinner leisurely whether at home or in a restaurant Then for two hours do anything you like—be it bridge the theatre or a concert, so long as it does not involve physical activity.

At the end of that time you can go to your hotel or night club and dance in the realization that it is good exercise, good fun, and a splendid means of warding of encroaching age.

FIND GOLD COINS IN OLD BUILDING

CORRY, Pa., July 10.—Eight $10 gold pieces, covered with dust, were picked from underneath the flooring of the remodeled Boston house property. The property was erected in 1861 and as it was customary a half century or so ago to secrete gold coins about the premises, it is believed that the pieces were put in place by someone saving them for the proverbial "rainy day."

Men Won't Take Physical Exams, Marriage Is Off

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 10. — Refusal of 10 men to undergo physical examinations today appeared to be preventing Miss Bobbie Connor, aged 20, Four Mile Run Road, from selecting a husband.

Miss Connor said last week she would marry any man of good reputation who would give her family $2,000. More than 70 men offered to marry here. Miss Connor told each one he would have to have an examination before she would consider him. She agreed to do the same.

Yesterday Miss Connor picked 10 of the most promising applicants and asked them again to have a physical exam. They refused. Now Miss Connor says she will not go through with her proposal.

Meanwhile Bobbie is hoping that she will receive an offer from someone who will be willing to go through with her proposition. She already has had inquiries from men in New York, Cnicago, Steubenville, and Alliance.

Fred is visiting with his brother Charles and was accompanied west by his mother.

Animal Utopia Is Big Success

Nature Lovers Are Astonished By Results At Animal Farm In Lehigh Mountains

(International News Service)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., July 10.—An animal Utopia, wher the lion (if one were present) would doubtless lie down with the lamb, has been discovered by animal and nature lovers, nestled in the Lehigh mountains near here.

The "Utopia" is the stock farm of E. A. Gerlach. Here little kittens have German shepherd dogs as playmates, baby chicks romp with cats and kids and dogs exist in perfect equanimity. The farm boasts about 40 dogs, 20 cats, 20 goats, innumerable chickens and sheep, hogs and cattle.

The animals were acquired by the Gerlachs as pets and since they began collecting them, Gerlach reports, there has been little enmity or ill-will between them.

Action Begun To Obtain Painting

(International News Service)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., July 10.—An action in replevin, to recover from a local artist the "Lesson In Prayer," masterpiece of the famed 15th century Italian painter, Corregio, has been started in the Lehigh county prothonotary's office here.

The suit was filed for Dorothy Hubler, of New York City, against Melvin W. Hubler, local artist, his wife, Ruth, and A. N. Lindenmuth. The picture was purchased in Germany, according to depositions filed in the case, brought to New York and sent to Allentown in custody of Lindenmuth for sale. Melvin Hubler, a stepson of the New York owner, took the painting to his studio, Mrs. Hubler alleges, and she has been unable to obtain it since.

The painting is valued at approximately $20,000, according to critics.

Camden Policeman Bruises Students

(International News Service)

CADEM, N. J., July 10.—Next time William Schultz, Camden policeman, announces he is a 'cop" in plain clothes, he is apt to be taken at his word.

John Johnson and David Tyrella, who told police they were University of Pennsylvania students, didn't believe Schultz when he declared himself a plainsclothesman and asked why they hadn't stopped for a traffic light.

They claimed he was a "buttinsky" and other things, then attacked him. When it was over, Schultz led both to Cooper hospital where they were treated for sundry bruises and abrasions, then charged them with assault and battery.

Ring Lost 32 Years Is Finally Found

(International News Service)

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., July 10.—Thirty two years ago, Mrs. Hannah Brown was cutting the grass on a family plot in the Odd Fellow's cemetery here. She lost her wedding ring and search for it was unavailing.

Last Memorial Day, Thomas D. Adams was walking through the cemetery and noticed a bleaming object in the grass.

He picked it up. It was Mrs. Brown's wedding ring.

Adams returned it to Mrs. Brown's family.

Truth Vs. Intolerance

"Brass Tacks" On The Sunday School Lesson

The Golden Text

We ought to obey God rather than men.—Acts 5:29.

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

The church whose founding and witness on Pentecost is recorded in the first two chapters of Acts now meets with its first opposition. It is interesting to note that, while, according to the gospels, the chief opposition that confronted Christ arose from the Pharisees, the chief opposition that confronted His church, according to the Acts of the Apostles, arose from the Sadducees. This is understood when we remember that the chief tenet of the Sadducees was their denial of the resurrection of the dead, which the church tenaciously proclaimed on the grounds of Christ's resurrection.

A Miracle and a Message

Peter and John had just been the channels of power for the risen Lord's healing of a crippled man, forty years of age, who had been helpless since birth, and who was laid daily at the beautiful gate of the temple to beg alms of the worshipers. To him Peter had said, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." As the crowds marveled at the miracle, Peter courageously waded into a discussion of their sinful and murdeous rejection of Christ and God's approval of Him as evidenced in His resurrection, and gave credit for the miracle to the presence and power of Christ. "By faith in His name hath His name made this man strong, whom ye behold and know." So convincing was the sermon with the healed man before their eyes as "exhibit A" that about five thousand souls were converted.

But "the priests and the captain of the temple and the Sadducees," representing the forces of religious prejudice, political power and intolerant rationalism, came upon the apostles in the temple and arrested them, probably together with the man they had healed. On the morrow, in answer to their inquiry, "By what power, or in what name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even in Him doth this man stand here before you whole, and in none other is there salvation; for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved."

The jury was confronted with an array of stubborn facts, chief of which was not, the healed cripple but the spirit-filled lives of "unlearned and ignorant men" who utterly stumped all their wisdom, and for whom they could find no other explanation than "that they had been with Jesus," and "they could say nothing against it."

But the forces of intollerance are never bothered with facts. If the facts are all against them so much the worse for the facts!"We cannot deny it,' "it is manifest to all," was their own confession behind closed doors. "But that it spread no further among the people, let us threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name." This was the devilish conclusion of learned schoolmen who had not been with Jesus regarding "unlearned and ignorant men" who "had been with Jesus." Then came the ultimatum of truth upon the scaffold to wrong upon the throne: "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you rather than unto God, judge ye: for we cannot but speak the things which we saw and heard."

(The International Uniform Lesson for July 12 is Acts 5:1-14 the subject being, "The Preaching of the Apostles," and the Golden Text, Acts 5:29. "We ought to obey God rather than men.")

Two Men Hurt In Explosion

The blast occurred when a steam boiler exploded.

Walter Dick 27, Roaring Spring, was painfully scalded over his entire body and Homer Oaks, a machine tender in the mill suffered burns and injury to his spine.

MERCER NEWS

There is a regulartiy about death that is of news value if the record of State Appraiser Frank Smith can be accepted as any criterion.

An average of 30 estates a month are handled in Mercer County by the official the year round, his records show. During the summer months the number drops below this figure while increases are shown in the winter and spring months. Pneumoina is the most to be feared of winter diseases.

Fines derived from motorists who do not observe stop signs will in the future be turned over to the town or township in which the offense occurs announce city officials.

Chief Leonard Ringer plans a drive this summer on enforcement of this act.

The Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland have through their attorneys asked that attorneys representing W. D. Gordon commissioner in banking of Pennsylvania now in possession of the Dollar Title and Trust Company of Sharon file a more specific statement of claim in their suit.

The commissioner has sued the company on the $100,000 bond written on Cashier R. E. Matthews which they have refused to pay, so claims the commissioner.

The suit will be up for trial at the November court term. It will be one of two brought by the bank, the other being an action to collect another bond of $50,000.

Attorneys say that these suits will constitute a legal battle ground. Regardless of how they may be decided in the lower courts they will be carried to the appellant courts for final decision, say barrieters.

The Crawford conuty home of John Brown whose death in the cause of abolition has immortalized him has been purchased by the State of Pennsylvania and will be used for park purposes.

Senate Bill 728 signed by Governor Pinchot provides for the purchase of the farm of 100 acres near New Richmond, where Brown made his home for ten years. His first wife and two children are buried there. Foundations of the tannery he operated are still there.

Dr. John S. Duncan who is a member of the Memorial Association who has taken an active interest in having this farm taken over has been notified of the action.

Woman Says Sheriff Insincere In Raids

(International News Service)

HACKENSACK, N. J., July 10.—Sheriff Harold V. Reilly of Bergen county said Thursday that the charge made by Mrs. Eva Taylor, head of the Bergen county chapter of the W. C. T. U., that he was "insincere" in raiding resorts in the county is both true and justified.

"Of course I am insincere," the sheriff said. "I have no sympathy with the prohibition law, so how can I be sincere? All I can do is my duty—I am not required to do violence to my conscience."

Nine of Sheriff Reilly's deputies recently visited 68 alleged speakeasies in Bergen county and found no liquor. He said, however, that 51 of the 282 cafes, speakeasies and restaurants in the county had been closed recently by his men in order to "break up the graft and protection racket in the county."

Dr. C. A. Hartung At Methodist Church

In the absence of the pastor, Dr. H. C. Weaver, who is taking his annual vacation, the congregation of the First Methodist church will be addressed by Dr. C. A. Hartung, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Beaver Falls, Sunday morning.

Oh, Wisdom, what fool things are done in thy name!

LARGE ORDERS ARE AWARDED

Westinghouse Company Receives Orders Totalling $2,500,000

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 10.—The Westinghouse companies here have received orders totaling approximately $2,500,000, including an order the Pennsylvania Railroad Company placed with Westinghouse Airbrake Company for more than $1,000 000 worth of equipment. The latter will provide brakes for 150 of the electric locomotives soon to be built for the railroad.

A total of 230 locomotives will be built, and the order for the remaining 80 may be placed shortly.

Westinghouse Airbrake officials stated the order would be filled over a period of several months, so an estimate of the number of men to be affected at the Wilmerding plant could not be made at present.

A contract for new main propelling machinery for three battleships, to cost $1,395,632, was awarded by the Navy department to the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company. The machinery is one item in the modernization of the battleships New Mexico, Mississippi and Idaho, authorized at the last session of Congress at an estimated cost of $30,000,000.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company has also received an order from the Puget Sound Power & Light Company for a 25,000 K. V. A. synchronous condenser with automatic control switching equipment. The condenser will be made at the East Pittsburgh plant.

Rev. Margaret Joshua At Third Church

Rev. Margaret Joshua, well known woman preacher of this city, will be the speaker in the Third United Presbyterian church at the morning service.

Rev. Joshua is noted for her oratorical ability and powerful sermons and it is anticipated that the entire congregation of the Third church, which is the largest in the city, will hear her speak.

It is estimated that one out of every 34 automobiles meets with some sort of accident every year.

Air Parade's Logs Furnish Vital Data

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The Army Air Corps' 1931 maneuvers are proving the most valuable field exercises ever held by the aerial defense branch of the service as technical experts settled to work on hundreds of pages of data collected during the nearly three weeks of flying carried out by 1400 officers and men in a formation of 672 planes.

Although the work has just begun, already favorable answers were available for dozens of questions which have been puzzling the air corps for years. Detailed, technical analyses, will show, when the task of examining data is completed, just how men and machines stood the long grind of flying and answer additional questions.

Thus far, the maneuvers have shown the Army air chiefs not only that large formations of planes may be moved from place to place, over long distances, swiftly and with safety, provided precautions are taken, but that American aviators as a type are fliers that may be called upon for the most difficult tasks in times of emergency, and that the primary fliers or youngsters of the corps can be depended upon to bear their share of the burden of fighting in the air.

The maneuvers proved, air corps officials say, that if necessary the war department can use members of the graduating classes of the various army flying schools in large active regular army units; that young pilots who have just won their wings may be placed in active groups and wings where the highest degree of flying efficiency is maintained. The fledglings can be whipped into formations with their more experienced brothers and not slow them up a whit, the analyses show already.

Radio control of aerial forces on the move was practiced during the maneuvers, and proved satisfactory. The big 672 plane parade unit sent various formations as far as 200 miles away in forming the 20 mile cavalcade which swept over parade points, and the formation worked with clocklike precision.

"Each day during the maneuvers," says one of the first tables worked out from maneuvers data, "an improvement was noted in the time in which the various units could meet at some aerial rendezvous and assemble there as one unit, all component parts in their proper place and at proper intervals."

One of the most serious problems expected to find an answer in the maneuver logs, (and one, incidentally, the answers to which will not be made public), involved the determination of improved methods of handling and servicing such a force in the air.

Thus far the army has asked a number of questions, the answers to which will go in the archives of the air corps and the result in a general stepping up of operations in every aviation post in the country. They include the following:

"What problems would a mobile unit present that one with stabilized operations would not?

"In movements from one part of the country to another, what assistance could be expected from civil authorities, and citizens' organizations which would smooth the way for our coming and establishing ourselves in a new site?"

Details of the answers to these problems are carefully withheld, but from the office of the chief of air corps, Major General James E. Fechet, came favorable comment on the aid given the army fliers by civil aviation during the maneuvers.

"Airport operators throughout the country assured us of their desire to have the units use their fields," said a statement from Fechet's office published in the air corps information bulletin of the month. "The question of civil assistance was answered to our satisfaction from the very first."

"Red Ace's" Aunt Aged Baroness, In First Flight

DENVER, Col., July 10.—A long life of daring adventure culminated in the first airplane ride of the aged Baroness Louis Von Richtofen, grandaunt of Germany's "red ace" of the World war.

The baroness, long a resident in "Richtofen castle" which looms above the Colorado prairies just east of Denver with the forbidding grandeur of old world magnificence, soared over Colorado's mountain peaks in a plane piloted by Dick Leferdink, Casper, Wyo., flyer.

"I have crossed the ocean 23 times and have gone into the depths of Alaska where probably no other other woman has been," she explained. "So I decided I should fly. My family is military, and my nephew was a master aviator. I am in keeping with tradition."

Although refusing to reveal her age, the baroness proved herself to be young in spirit and energy.

"I intend to keep young, happy and gay to the last minute," she said "And there is no better way to do that than to live in the world as it is today."

Baroness Richtofen was accompanied on her first flight by Mrs. Harry C. Chappell of Denver and by her son, Walter Storrie.

Colored Pair Held To September Court

James and Carrie Fields, colored, charged with highway robbery were held for the September term of county court following a hearing in the office of Alderman Walter T. Hamilton this morning.

The two are charged by Police Chief Horner with assaulting and robbing Mike Lenhart, Meadow St. on Moravia street early Wednesday morning and taking $35 from him. The two are held in bond of $500 each.

Still, 350 new dry agents should make the speakeasy business boom for a while.

Prison Gates Open

Prison gates have swung open for Mrs. Olive Storey Adams (above), convicted more than two years ago of slaying her husband, Harry Emerson Adams, Buddha-worshipping Federal meteorologist, of Hartford, Conn. Adams, who lived a Dr. Jekyl-Mr. Hyde existence during their married life, was chloroformed to death by his wife as he slept by her side. The victim was said to have been unfaithful to his wife and took up Buddha-worship in an effort to atone.

Peace Urge and Progress Hit Soldier of Fortune

* * * * * *

Wars and Revolutions Occur with Less Frequency and Are Over Before Mister Adventurer Can Join the Fracas

With the nations of the earth turning from Mars disillusioned, that hardy breed, the soldiers of fortune, find themselves at a very loose end. And it is not alone the desire for peace that irks these colorful trouble-hunters. Progress also has done its share to make life uninteresting for the men whose very existence is fighting and adventure. Planes and radio have taken a lots of the romance out of surprise revolutions. No more can men like Lee Christmas stride through South American jungles setting up or unseating governments just for the fun of it. And to make things worse, the attitude of the U. S. in refusing to recognize governments set up by coup d'etat has had a pronounced effect in discouraging revolutions. Perhaps the most colorful soldier of fortune alive today is Rafael de Nogales, who fought in revolts from Mexico to Brazil and rose to be a division commander in the Turkish Army. Another name that comes readily to mind is that of Bert Hall, an American now with General Chan's army in China. Then there is Alfred Batson, American author, who stirred things up in South America until the U. S. Marines invited him to leave.

Local Youth Saves Lad From Drowning In Juniata Waters

Donald Rice Goes To Aid Of Non-Swimmer At Cypher's Station, Pa.

Credit for saving the life of a drowning youth at one of the popular bathing beaches along the Juniata river last week goes to a New Castle young man, Donald Rice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Van Rice of Sampson street, according to word received here.

The Rice boy, according to the meagre information rescued a 14-year-old boy who was unable to swim, after he had fallen out of a row boat in some manner.

The rescue took place at Cypher's Station, probably 35 or 40 miles south of Altoona.

According to his parents here, Don is spending the summer working on a farm in that vicinity and had just reached the river for a swim as the boy toppled out of the boat. A throng witnessed the rescue.

FRED C. DUFF IS TAKEN ILL SUDDENLY

Fred C. Duff of Sheridan avenue, assistant secretary and treasurer of the People's Savings and Trust Co. is recovering from an operation for appendicitis in the New Castle hospital. Mr. Duff was stricken while at work yesterday, and when his condition became worse, he was taken to the hospital where an operation was performed.

"Thumbers" Still Annoy Motorists

Hitch Hikers Do Not Seem To Be Aware Of Law Passed By Recent Legislature

Hitch-hikers who 'thumb rides" in this city do not seem to know that a law was passed by the last legislature forbidding persons standing on streets and highways to thumb rides. The law does not appear to prohibit the soliciting of rides, but it does prohibit getting out on the street or highway to do so.

A fine of $10 and costs has been fixed as the penalty for any violation of this law as follows: "Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall, upon summary conviction before a magistrate be sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs of prosecution, and in default of payment thereof shall undergo imprisonment for not more than five days.

The new law is expected to discourage "thumbers" and prevent them from becoming a nuisance to motorists. It is not uncommon for the bolder type of hitch-hikers to stand in the middle of the street or road. There are some hitch-hikers who hurl insults at motorists who refuse their demands.

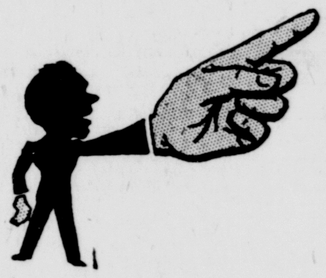

SUIT IS ENTERED ON BILL FOR BOOKS

The American Book Company has filed a suit at the prothonotary's office against the Neshannock township school board, to collect a balance of $838.61. The bill is for books alleged to have been sold to the board for use in Neshannock township schools.

HOW TO PREPARE A PONCHO FOR AN OVERNIGHT HIKE—

PREPARING A MEAL—

Hints For Amateur Campers

Don't throw lighted cigarettes in the woods; 50 per cent of the forest fires start from them.

Don't leave the camp for any length of time without putting out all fires.

Don't leave boxes of matches in the sun.

Don't cut greenwood to burn; it sputters too much.

Don't destroy green timber needlessly.

Don't forget to bring a pocket knife and a can opener.

Don't forget emergency kit.

Don't forget ax, nails, wire and cord.

Never pitch a tent facing up or down a valley; in case of rain or strong wind it will be very unpleasant; always face it crossways; toward a hill preferably.

Always locate near water or a spring.

If it is too dark to pitch tent don't sleep in a hollow; they usually are waterways. Find a nice, soft hill.

Always split wood on another piece; it saves the ax.

Paris Gaming Clubs Have High Stakes

A MAN went into a Paris gambling club with "300 louis" in his pocket—the "louis" being the old 20-franc goldpiece, and still, today, the current counting denomination in Paris fast life.

So, at today's exchange, he had a trifle less than $300 to risk; and we can count the lous as $1.

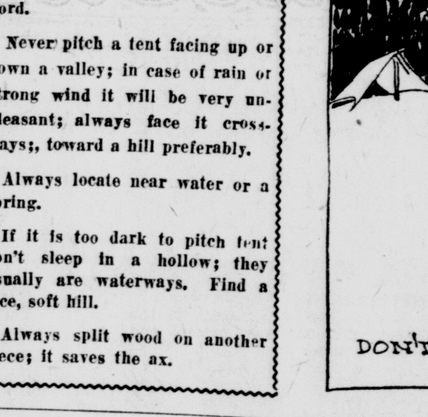

He laid $100 on one of the baccarat tables—It is all baccarat, in Paris. Roulette is forbidden. He lost. He put down another $100 and lost. He had 100 lous left, and hesitated. Finally he bet $75, and lost again. With $25 left, to keep him warm, he took a walk around the rooms.

The cold feet intermission lasted about ten minutes. Drawn strongly to take another last try, he returned to the table where he had lost his money.

Now, two things are noted. First, "the bank" at that table had been winning furiously—if the man had remained, his little 25 louis would have been swept away. Secondly, he came back just as luck changed. In less than fourteen turns he had won 10,000 francs. He cashed in, ate a sandwich. Then he began again, and won 2,000,000 francs—almost $100,000—before 12:30 noon!

Do you get it?

It is an old trick of sly and thoughtful players to go to bed early, get a good night's rest, and then when the alarm clock rings at 5 a. m., to rush into full evening dress clothes and get to the Casino in time to sit—cool-headed, capable—in the disorderly, reckless game of men who have been eating and drinking, winning and losing, all night!

Women bankers are permitted at Cannes. Some are liable to put up a million.

Head of the "Syndicate" formed to play baccarat. It wins or loses eight millions in a day.

Play In Early Morning.

The scheme is still good at Deauville, Aix or Cannes—the "watering-place" gambling, where millions in cash bundles of 1000-franc bills are owned by pleasure-seekers, real or make-believe. Now, pleasure-seekers are so named because they seek pleasure. They begin at midnight, and hit the hay not later than 7 a. m.—because they need it!

More than half the men you meet, when you rush to "the club" at 6 a. m., are just as cool and capable as you, because they, too, have had a good night's rest—only their alarm clock went off earlier. They go to bed in the afternoon, sleep 10 or 12 hours, have a nice bath, cup of coffee, and refreshing walk of a few blocks—to take advantage of any gamblers, hot-headed, or cool-headed, who may run up against them!

In Paris they are out for blood.

There are no ladies in the gaming "Clubs" of Paris.

It is a queer thing, and works to make higher play—where it was the presence of ladies, precisely, which started the phenomenally high play at Deauville, Aix-les-Bains and Cannes!

Never has there been such high play in the history of the world.

The old story of Talleyrand and Metternich playing chess at the Congress of Vienna, with half a dozen $10,000 bets on each side, would sound like college sports today, both at the watering-places and in Paris.

Into this busy boulevard, beside the Credit Lyonnaise, at 10 a. m., amid the crush of honest business, a man walked out of such a "club"—with "Andre's" check for three millions in his pocket!

The sum is nothing, nor the fact that it was won and cashed in before lunchtime. The strong thing is that the gambler took the club-master's check for it.

He asked for the check!

He preferred the check, because 3,000,000 francs in usual "bricks" of rubber-banded bundles of 1000-franc Bank of France bills make a bulky load to carry in the pocket. At Cannes, Deauville and Aix, where they play cash on the tables, such bulk riches has required protective devices in the small hours. In the "clubs" of Paris you are paid cash, up to any sum—no limit!

It is a common thing to see three million, six million, eight million francs won and lost on the turn of a single card! Now, eight million francs are close to $400,000 in bank where you want to realize them.

The head of "the Syndicate," is formed to play baccarat, with a vast capital. The members take turns in playing it; but "the head," in particular, a grim, bald, long-nosed party with a chin that points up toward it, has notoriously "made differences" of 8,000,000 francs, both at Cannes, Aix, Deauville, and, now, in Paris!

Recent maneuvers on the part of this or that club to evade, perhaps colossal taxes levied in proportion to their rake-off profits (by the new law which permits their existence) have been misunderstood; and resulting rumors of their "impending failure or reorganization" are being threatened to be met, in Paris, by libel suits.

Sufficient to say, they are not failing.

"How could any concern be failing that takes an honest 7 per cent broker's commission on each "bank" of $20,000, $30,000, $50,000 or $60,000, lasting say, an average of 15 minutes—and then, beginning again with a new "bank" and a new 7 per cent rake-off?

No American need be told the names or addresses of these "clubs" in Paris. On the boat, before he lands, he hears tales of vast winnings—and easy club membership. In Paris, he cannot frequent night restaurants without some friendly soul to offer to make him join the lodge in five minutes.

It is so true that a certain high-toned bar, in the dead center of the tourist boulevard, takes advantage of the new law to run in its upstairs rooms, and practically advertise "baccarat for all" and "a poor man's game," where anyone (with luck) can win a fortune while his wife is buying a hat around the corner!

That is to say, the Paris papers, finding the idea piquant and novel, have given "George's" club considerable free publicity. How it is different from "Andred's," after all, or any other proprietary concern with unlimited capital, run under the "club" forms permitted by the new law, which, above all, seeks revenue for the state. "George's" is small potatoes; but he has the same right to run a club as the baccarat giants. It may be that he pays his taxes-on-rake-off more scrupulously than some others!

You enter the bar, and order a drink. You ask: "Is this the club?" They answer: "Yes." You say: "I want to be a member." And they answer: "Forty francs."

A million francs "banker" for ten minutes. He'll sait it down, if he can.

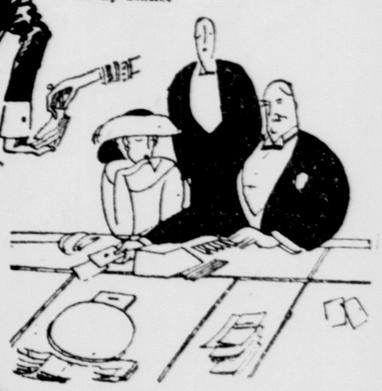

You pay, and sign the book, and walk upstairs, where you can buy chips of a cashier in the corner. There's a game on, all day, all night. You can put down twenty francs—which means $1; but you yell out loud: "I am a piker!" if you do it. The poor man's game, in fact, is rather rich. Best make a noble play—slap down $5 and let it lie, if it wins!

It is a perfect image, in small, of the games where millions change hands. Do not imagine that any of these clubs employ the business representative known as the "capper." Doubtless, they are glad to have rich American plungers swell the big "banks" from which they take their rake-off. But the players of these millions, to tell the facts simply, are cold-blooded specialists of all nations.

You have read, of course, of this or that American at Deauville, Cannes or Aix, who has won or lost big sums at baccarat. Even the ladies! The wife of a socially prominent American in Paris, himself known as a bridge authority and author of books on the subject, was recently in the cable news by name, as winner of 800,000 francs in one night, and getting away from Deauville with three millions. Now, three million francs are still close to $150,000, as when the gambler took "Andre's" check for it!

There is a heavy, motherly Levantine lady who bids 300,000 francs for the bank privilege, puts up her $15,000 capital, and makes a face as 7 per cent is amputated from it for the good of the establishment—that is more than $1000 in the hole, already, before she begins to deal cards. Every cent of the remainder is covered instantly—and if she deals three bad cards to herself, she has got to find another bankroll on the spot, or quit the seat!

A woman gambler at Deauville. The average woman is a safety attachment, too prudent to encourage crazy risks.

To the left is the "Athenian," son Venizelos' first cousin, who won four millions in four hours.

London elementary schoolboys between 8 and 9 years of age are declared to be nearly half an inch taller and 3¾ pounds heavier than those of twenty years ago.

Truth is as impossible to be soiled by any outward touch as the sunbeam.

Farmer Boys To Get Fine Chance To See The World

Floating School Will Carry Youths To Strange Ports

(International News Service)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 10.—Captain E. Topp, after steering California's "one ship" navy through legislative waters, is now preparing to shove off for strange lands in the Orient and south seas.

And with him on the maiden deep sea cruise of the nautical school ship "California State" will be nearly a hundred wide-eyed landlubber-students most of them recruited from parched hinterlands.

"Skipper" Topp, commander of the floating school and a retired lieutenant commander in the navy, appeared before the Senate education committee and won approval of an assembly bill which provides legislative sanction for acceptance of the old Tiburon navy fuel depot as a base for his state ship.

So everything is now all shipshape for Captain Topp to begin putting sea legs on California farmer boys and graduate them as natty officers for the United States merchant marine

The first task is to spend $250,000 of federal money to convert the vessel, a war-time lake type shipping board freighter, into a modern school ship.

Then all aboard for a 20,000-mile cruise to Japan, China, Dutch East Indies, Philippines, Guam and Honolulu.

"But it won't be a joy ride, mark you that!" elucidated Skipper Topp. "My boys are going to work hard and study hard and they'll be a credit to California when they join the merchant marine."

Captain Topp has already accepted 60 recruits for his three-year maritime classes, with room enough for at least 60 more.

But the skipper isn't worried about getting a full crew.

"We're getting a dozen applications a day. Most of them farmer boys. Mighty fine timber, too."

The judge doesn't really punish contempt. He punishes the indiscretion of the one who reveals the contempt others feel.

Constable Serves Eighteen Writs To Obtain Dead Body

(International News Service)

SUNBURY, Pa., July 10.—One of the most unusual legal proceedings ever recorded in Northumberland county was noted here when Constable E. A. Fleming had to serve eighteen papers to gain custody of the body of a miner killed in a blast in the Richards tunnel.

Mrs. Emily Paraginiskie, of Mt. Carmel, bride of the miner, wanted the body for burial and sought an injunction to prevent members of her husband's family from interfering with her disposal of it.

In order to carry out the injunction order, Fleming had to serve writs upon the father, mother, brothers and sisters of the miner, the funeral director and attorneys for the parents.

Youth Of Nation Doing Very Well

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, July 10. — The youth of the nation is doing surprisingly well in the face of constantly increasing temptations created by adults for personal gain or the satisfaction of low tastes," Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette College at Easton, told the National Missions Association here.

Racketeers and vice lords "seem to have things their own way in scores of American communities," Dr. Ellis said, "while the so-called good citizen allow their children to grow up under unwholesome conditions."

Farmer Plans To Protect Cherries

(International News Service)

WORK, Pa., July 10. — William Ruhl, farmer living near Dover, is going to enjoy some of the cherries from his trees this year.

It will be an unusual pleasure for every season for the past five years thieves have beaten him to it and stripped the trees of every cherry.

ELIZABETHTOWN, Pa., July 10—"Don't hesitate to be a crank," was the advice graduates of the Elizabethtown High School got from Dr. Isadore Rosenthal, famed "Flying Parson" of Lancaster, when he delivered the commencement address at the local school graduating exercises.

"All the greatest persons I have met have been cranks," Dr. Rosenthal said, "and have expressed their own individualism and characteristics in their own way."

Girls of the class were also advised not to give too-serious consideration to "careers" by the speaker, who told them motherhood is still woman's greatest career.

Salvation Army Hopes To Obtain Surplus Of Food

Will Be Conserved For Use Of Needy During Coming Fall And Winter

At a meeting of the advisory board of the Salvation Army held Thursday afternoon in the hall, 34 West Washington street, suggestion of Ensign and Mrs. V. Thomsen, officers in charge of the local corps, that surplus fruits and farm products, which farmers and others might be willing to donate to be canned and held in reserve by the army for distribution among the needy during the coming fall and winter months was approved.

Under the plan those persons, who have a surplus of fruits or products, which they desire to have use made of, rather than let them go to waste for lack of selling markets or means of using them, are asked to notify the local corps headquarters and arrangements will be made to go and get them.

Mrs. V. Thomsen and assisting ladies will can or cold pack these products and store them away until fall and winter, when they can be used to the best advantage in helping the needy and hungry of the city and county. It is hoped and anticipated that there will be a most generous response and that a very considerably supply can be secured in this manner.

The meeting was very well attended and was presided over by William M. White, chairman of the board. Many matters of importance were considered and Chairman White announced that he proposed to name a budget committee in the near future. Several new members of the board were in attendance.

Explanation was made by Ensign Thomsen of the salaries paid officers and also of the fact that every officer on entering the work knows that if there is no funds to pay him with, that he has no claim for same or assurance of the same. It was shown that due to the present low status of the funds of the army, that he has not received his full allocation of salary for several months. An officer of the army carries on regardless of his own renumeration. The work of the army must go on regardless of the renumeration or comfort of its officers.

The entire salary overhead of the local corps was shown to be but $31 a week, when funds are available to pay them in full, including the renumeration of the officer in charge and a girl secretary to care for the office.

Ensign V. Thomsen commended Andrew Cross, a candidate for training as an officer and Miss Florence Neely, who has charge of the office and also desires to enter a training school of the army, to the board for any assistance that might be possible in helping them to accomplish their object.

Urges Prosecutors To Study Prisons

(International News Service)

BALTIMORE, July 10.—Dr. William A. White, superintendent of the government's St. Elizabeth's hospital in Washington, told the Mental Hygiene society of Maryland that lawyers should be required to study conditions in prisons, just as physicians serve as internes in hospitals, before they take office as prosecutors or judges in criminal cases.

He said the importance of the individual should dominate in the handling of all criminal cases and denounced the vengeance motive of present laws. He believes conditions will improve by the gradual enlightenment of the courts and penal officials rather than by direct changes in criminal laws.

CROSS-EYED CONFESSIONS

Muchly Married But No Husbands

The Woes Of A Wife Who Wed Men Going Out Into The World To Establish Records—They Continue Going, To Other Women, But Flag-Pole Sitter Proves Safe

BY JOHN P. MEDBURY

Matrimony may hold a lot of pleasures for some women, but as far as I'm concerned they can take wedlock and throw the key away. How well I remember those words of my dear mother: "Give a husband enough rope and he'll lead you a dog's life."

For many years I was the devoted and loving wife of a six-day bicycle rider. He was only home about seven days out of the month and we got along fine until I discovered that he wasn't spending all of the other twenty-four days on his bicycle.

It was during one of the big races at Madison Square Garden, in New York, that he was revealed in his true colors. I happened to go to the arena one night and there was my husband riding around the track with a pretty little blond on the handlebars.

His Alibi!

The following Saturday when he came home, I asked him to explain himself, and his alibi was a novel one. He said he had received a lot of fan mail and the little blond was a stenographer whom he had hired to take dictation so that he could get all of his letters answered by the end of the race.

I immediately sued for an annulment of our marriage on the grounds that the morning I married him it was so foggy I couldn't see what I was doing.

Three weeks later another man came into my life and when he proposed to me I accepted him. He was a cross-country runner and it was a case of love at first hike.

A Running Start

The wedding was performed in New York City and the next day he left on a cross-country sprint to San Francisco. My new husband was loath to leave me on our wedding eve and begged me to run behind him to the Pacific coast, so that we could spend our honeymoon together.

This, however, was out of the question, as my feet were still sore from breaking in my former husband's new bicycles. I was broken-hearted to think that my feet would not stand the trip, as it was a wonderful opportunity to see the country.

—And there was my husband riding around the track with a pretty little blond on the handlebars

But my husband was very sympathetic and promised me that as soon as my feet got well he would let me accompany him the next time he ran to Chicago. He figured the shorter trips would be better for me as I would probably get pretty tired running to San Francisco.

A Goodby Kick

I'll never forget how wonderful he looked that morning in his new running shoes, and how proud I felt when he kicked me goodbye. He hadn't been gone ten days, though, before I learned he had deceived me.

Through newspaper dispatches I discovered that there were six or seven lady cross-country runners on the trip. My husband was a weakling and hadn't been on the road more than 24 hours when he succumbed to the wiles of a woman whose feet were hardier than mine.

I retained a lawyer and sued for divorce, but lost my case the first time. Two weeks later I went to court again, but this time I wore a shorter dress and thinner stockings and had no trouble at all obtaining a decree.

Guess What Now!

My two unsuccessful matrimonial ventures had unnerved me, so I went away for a rest. By this time I was love-hungry and craved a little home life and companionship. It was at this moment that George and I were thrown together. A whirlwind courtship was followed by a speedy wedding, and you can imagine my sorrow in the morning when I discovered that I had married an Arctic explorer.

He explained to me that the reason he married me in such a hurry was that he was leaving the next afternoon for the north pole and wouldn't be back for nine or ten months and wanted to have somebody to think of while he was gone.

There were only 24 hours before he left, and we didn't have any time to be together, as I was kept busy helping him fill the hot water bags and packing presents for the eskimos.

I knew, however, that he was the one man in the world for me, so I decided to wait for him until he returned from the expedition to the Antarctic. He had promised to bring me back a lot of seals and polar bears and as much other stuff as he could carry.

A Slip of Memory

Eleven months of loneliness dragged by and then the momentous day arrived and I went down to the dock to meet the boat which was bringing back the explorers, among whom was the man I loved.

The vessel docked and every man got off the boat with the exception of my husband. I thought this was strange, so I sought out the captain. After much beating around the bushes he told me that my husband had divorced me in Lapland, and married an eskimo woman. It seems that he had met her on previous expeditions and had promised to make her his wife, but had forgotten all about it when he proposed to me.

There was nothing I could do about it as it was too cold to go up there and argue with him. I had now been married three times and hadn't had one day of home-life, but I decided to keep on trying until I got some.

The next man I married was a sailor, but our romance wasn't lasting. In less than six months I divorced him, but I wasn't single two weeks before I turned right around and fell in love with a flagpole sitter. He is now up there on a flagpole on his 73rd day of sitting, and I am still waiting for some of that companionship that so many women to my problem: Can it be that I don't marry the right kind of men?

Hit By Golf Ball? It's Your Hard Luck

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, July 10—Being hit by a golf ball while on the links is just a risk of the game the golfer must accept, the Pennsylvania Superior Court has ruled in a decision believed to set a precedent in the United States.

Leon H. Benjamin was hit by a ball played by Murice A. Nernberg on public links in Philadelphia. A jury gave Benjamin $1,000 damages, and a Common Pleas Court judge set the award aside. The Superior Court, upholding the lower court in refusing Benjamin's appeal said in an opinion:

"It must be admitted that the plaintiff assumed all the ordinary dangers incident to the game. It is well known that not every shot played by a golfer goes to the point where he intends it to go. If such were the case every player would be perfect and the whole pleasure of the sport would be lost.

"He (Benjamin) must have known that many bad shots carry the ball to the right or left of the intended line of play. This risk all golfers must accept."

Death Was Due To Negligent Driving

SHARON, Pa., July 10.—The death of Frank Figerell, 45, who was instantly killed in an automobile accident on the Greenville-Jamestown road early last Wednesday evening, was attributed to the negligent driving of his son, Joseph, following a coroner's inquest held in the Greenville City building by Coroner William McGrath last evening.

The jury pointed out that the negligence was not sufficient to warrant criminal prosecution but recommended that the youth's driving license be revoked. D. B. Weber, Greenville, driver of a car with which the Figerell machine figured in a collision before the car crashed into a tree, was exonerated of all blame.

WARREN COUPLE WEDDED 53 YEARS

Puzzlers

Can you draw this pair of spectacles, on Uncle Sam, with a continuous line, wtihout taking your pencil from the paper, and never crossing a line?

ANSWER TO PUZZLE
This is how it is done.

Sparks From New Castle Motor Club

Sixteen States And District Of Columbia Require An Examination For New Driver.

Sixteen states and the District of Columbia now require an examination as a prerequisite to securing a license to drive and in these states the accident situation is improving as compared to those where no demonstration of driving ability is required, according to Ralph W. Bolsinger, president of the New Castle Motor Club.

Mr. Bolsinger listed the states where an examination is mandatory, as follows:—Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and West Virginia.

"In addition," he said, "nine states have license laws with an examination either optional or not required, leaving twenty-three states in the non-licensing group.

The A. A. A. club executive pointed out that every sixteen minutes a human life is snuffed out on our streets and highways. He continued, "in states where an examination of drivers is mandatory, the records show that about twenty-five per cent of the applicants fail to secure their license on the first examination. The examiner either finds that they are ignorant of the rules of the road or the practical driving test shows that they have no knowledge of how to handle an automobile. These people, however, are always given subsequent opportunities to learn the regulations and to familiarize themselves with the handling of an automobile in traffic. Then they come back for a later examination and ultimately only three per cent of all candidates fail to get a license.

"The significance of this is that twenty-two per cent of the candidates in a licensing state are required to learn the rules of the road and how to drive, whereas in a non-licensing state, they may go on the road incompetent to drive.

And Other Drivers.

"Pennsylvania lost 11,294 men in the world war. They were killed in action, died of wounds or of disease. That was WAR. They were soldiers. There were no women or children in that list. Now, in times of peace about 2,000 men, women and children are being needlessly slaughtered annually. In the world war an enemy done the killing. Today, our friends and neighbors are doing it.

"Isn't it about time we checked up on our driving? Observance of the code; a little caution, a little care, plus consideration, will help a lot. In the meantime, the commonwealth proposes to aid in this with all the force of the power at its disposal.

CROSSWALKS.

As defined in the Pennsylvania Motor Code is,—That portion of a street or highway ordinarily included within the prolongation of curb and property lines at intersections, or any portion of a street or highway clearly indicated for pedestrain crossing by lines or other markings on the surface.

Intersections.

The area embraced within the prolongation of the lateral curb lines or, if none the lateral boundry lines of two or more streets or highways which join one another at an angle whether or not one such street or highway crosses the other.

With the defining of crosswalks and intersections it is clearly shown that the markings on our streets are there for a specific purpose, that is, to guide pedestrians in safety when crossing streets or highways.

The zones so marked give the right of way to the pedestrian in crossing, in accordance with the change of traffic lights or by the direction of an officer, when stationed at intersections.

Motorists should bear in mind that when they are stopping at these intersections or controlled zones, that the marked stretches are designated as foot walks and not parking places for your car when awaiting the change of traffic lights. GIVE THE PEOPLE ON FOOT A CHANCE.

Double parking must stop. The only way to eliminate this evil is for each and every one of us to park near the curb.

Do you remember when car owners organized road building crews and cleared up bad spots on the highways while the ladies went along and served dinner. YES . . . . and many of these workers are as they were then members of the NEW CASTLE MOTOR CLUB.

Do you remember when demountable rims were first introduced. Answer to questions published last week.

1—Inform the Pennsylvania Department of Revenue, Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

2—It is unlawful to park a motor vehicle within 500 feet of where fire apparatus has stopped in answer to a fire alarm.

3—Stop and render assistance, disclose identity and also report same to Department of Revenue, within twenty-four hours.

4—When it stops to take on or discharge passengers, on the side on which passengers get on and off, except where a safety zone is established. It is unlawful to pass to the left side of a trolley, when travelable portion of the highway exists to the right, except on a one-way street.

5—$25.00 fine, and costs of prosecution or ten days in jail.

AN ITEM FROM 1910.

Automobiles will henceforth be welcomed by the Hot Springs Hotels, which in the past has been somewhat antagonistic.

It is needless to add that the hotel today welcomes the car owner with open arms.

HIGHWAY PATROLMAN.

He will give you better traffic control and stop many accidents, injuries and deaths.

Better traffic control—that's what our community, and every community, needs to dam the rising tide of traffic accidents.

REMEMBER.

When stopping at traffic lights. Keep clear of the crosswalks.

Don't double park.

Don't insist on passing another car at the intersections.

Always consider the other fellow. And then you will be doing your part to eliminate a traffic condition that is dangerous.

BICYCLES STOLEN

According to the report made to the police, bicycles belonging to boys named Heck and McKinley, were stolen while they were at Hickory Creek in North Beaver township. The police are on the lookout for the stolen bicycles.

Dog Follows Her Master In Death

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, July 10—Believed to have grown disconsolate after the death of her master, "Queenie" pet Chow dog of the late Dr. Samuel E. Bruner, of Camp Hill, was found dead near the Bruner residence.

Members of the doctor's family said the dog "pined" for her master and refused food and attention after his death.

Correct this sentence: "I never condemn a fault in otiers," said the man, "Unless I am wholly free of it myself."

Mexico To Start Soldiers In Her Kindergartens

Indicated That Within Six Years National Will Have Million Reserves

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

MEXICO CITY, July 10.—Mexico is preparing to build up the greatest military reserve strength in her history, in addition to training and equipping a standing army rapidly being recognized as one of the world's best drilled fighting machines.

Under a new law published recently, the military training of the native will begin in mild manner in kindergarten and continue step by step through school and college. By the time the Mexican child of today has passed through the various educational stages, he will be every inch a soldier.

War Department statistics indicate that within eight years the country's trained reserve man-power will amount to 1,000,000 persons. Bolstering this formidable fighting arm will be 100,000 agrarians, a semi-military organization supplied with arms by the government in return for service on call. Finally, there is the standing army of 60,000 men.

The new law provides for the building up of reserve strength through a systematic process. Children of all ages must first of all be taught to salute the flag and respect it. The tots in kindergarten must be supplied with toy soldiers and pictures of military characters, which constitutes the first phase of their long training period.

As the school bell rings louder through succeeding years, the children will find themselves undergoing physical and military training that becomes more intense each year.

An interesting point is that the reserves, the agrarians and the standing army will soon be wholly equipped with Mexican made arms. The government, after erecting its own army equipment plants, has begun the gradual withdrawal of foreign arms in favor of its own makes.

Behind this energetic military activity, and the man chiefly credited with the modernizing of Mexico's army, is General Joaquin Amora, Secretary of War. He is a full-blooded Indian of rare foresight, and worked his way up from the ranks. In a few years he succeeded in changing the country's poorly organized and meagerly equipped soldiery to an army with all the snap and action found in other countries.

The Mexican army, for the first time, boasts a commissary. With further extension of this latter branch, there is a strong possibility that Mexico's army will be less colorful when on the road, but more certain of regular meals. Soup kitchens will replace the foraging wives of the soldiers, and the latest portable communication facilities will keep the army in touch with the capital.

Noted Physicist Talks Of Meteor Striking Earth

By EDWARD M. BAUER, JR.
International News Service Staff Correspondent

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif. July 10.—Although the possibility of the earth being struck by a comet or meteor is remote, nevertheless it still exists and no one is able to predict when such a collision might occur, according to Dr. David Locke Webster, noted Stanford physicist, who recently returned from making a study of the Barringer meteor crater in Arizona.

"These meteors and comets travel though space at speeds of nearly 70,000 miles an hour," Dr. Webster declared in an interview with International News Service. Large ones are extremely rare, but it was one of these collisions which caused the Arizona crater.

"For many years scientists claimed that this crater was caused by a steam explosion," he said, "but the finding of small bits of meteoric iron near the rim of the crater, which is 4000 feet in diameter and 500 feet deep, have supported my theory of a meteoric collision with the earth."

Dr. Webster was the first to advance this theory. He explained that the collision occurred during the Pleistocene Age, 1,500 000 years ago, and that a tremendous explosion of steam accompanied by an earthquake followed.

"The meteor was composed chiefly of iron, but contained nickel, iridium, and platinum, and weighed approximately 1,000,000 tons," he continued. "So fast was it traveling that if a man were able to go from San Francisco to Los Angeles at the same speed the trip would take only 29 seconds.

"When the meteor struck the earth, all forms of life on the Arizona plains were wiped out. A series of explosions, quakes and then a steam blast equal to 1,000,000 tons of dynamite killed all living creatures near the place.

The only similar collision occurring in recent times was in 1908 when a meteor struck the earth in Northern Siberia. It destroyed a forest, but little is known of it because its landing place was so remote from civilization," Dr. Webster concluded.

But isn't it rather childish to sell Russia a peanut roaster and then howl because she sells roasted peanuts?

But if she can live on $15 a week before marriage, why does it take $1200 a month alimony to support her?

Looks Can Deceive

The fact that appearances are deceiving profited Jacob Achenbach almost two million dollars. When the 87-year-old president of the Beaver, Meade and Englewood Railroad of Oklahoma went to the Katy Railroad offices in St. Louis four years ago to sell his 105-mile line for $600,000, clerks wouldn't let him see the president of the larger road because of his unkempt appearance. Still totally unchanged, Achenbach is shown with a $2,300,000 check from the president of the Katy Railroad. In four years the price of his property went up almost four times.

Twins Born With Abdomen Connected Reported Resting Comfortably

(International News Service)

BALTIMORE, July 10.—The twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Foster, born three days ago with their abdomen connected with a thick fleshy ligament, are going to be placed in incubators to help them regain the strength lost when their bodies were separated.

Although their father is a railroad brakeman, his infant daughters have aroused the attention of the medical and surgical world and they are destined to receive expert attention and care.

They were resting comfortably today in their reed baskets in Mercy hospital's baby room. Their nurses said they were acting just like other twins of normal birth.

White's Opinion On Appointments

Points Out Proper Method Of Naming Men To Fire Department

MAY DISCUSS OPINION MONDAY

When members of council met in city hall today Solicitor Robert White presented to council, an opinion requested by Councilman Clayton R. Reeves, superintendent of the fire department, relative to appointments to the department.

The opinion will be studied by council and will probably be discussed at Monday's session. It was ordered entered on the city records and is as follows:

"Mr. Reeves has asked for an opinion concerning appointments to the fire department. I do not know whether or not I understand exactly the scope of the opinion required, however, as I understand it, there are several questions involved, and I will, therefore, state the questions and answer them as follows:

1. Who has the power to appoint firemen?

The superintendent nominates a man and the council approves him. The council can not appoint any man that the superintendent does not nominate. An appointment by the superintendent is of no value until approved by council.

"2. When must the nomination be approved by council?

In the case of a regular appointment from the civil service list, the nomination must be made in open council and approved there before the appointee may have any standing as a fireman or be entitled to any pay.

"In a case of emergency appointment the superintendent may make the appointment and the council may approve it at any time thereafter.

If the Superintendent nominates a man without reporting it to Council and the name goes on the pay roll and the Council approves the pay roll, that is an approval of the appointment.

3. Can the Superintendent make a temporary or an emergency appointment without the approval of Council?

If a real emergency exists, as contemplated by the Act of Assembly, the Superintendent may make the appointment and put the man to work. If the appointment is not reported to Council or approved by Council until the pay roll comes in, the Council may approve the pay roll and so approve the appointment. If, however, the Council disapproved the appointment, the man's standing as a fireman would cease immediately, although I believe he would be entitled to the wages earned by him up until the time Council disapproves his appointment. There has always been a tacit understanding that the head of each department should select his own employees, but if the Council objects to such procedure, the action of Council is final. The fundamental law is that all city matters are under the control of the Council. In some exceptional cases the Act of Assembly puts particular power into the hands of one person. The Council has also by certain ordinances put power into the hands of one councilman, but of course that power can be revoked any time Council desires to do so. The best practice, therefore, is for the head of the department, when he makes an emergency appointment, to report it to Council as soon as possible in order that the Council may disapprove if it sees fit. Otherwise, opportunities arise for a misunderstanding and controversies about the payment for services actually rendered to the City.

Explains Emergency

4. What is meant by emergency appointments?

"This question is fully answered in two opinions rendered by me to Phil. G. Greer and by him communicated to Council, dated November 20, 1930, and March 3, 1931, respectively. I think nothing can be said about this subject that is not covered by those opinions. The old Act says that in cases of emergency temporary appointments in the said department may be made without complying with the provisions of the Act. The new Act says "in case of riot or emergency, temporary appointments may be made," etc.

"The question of whether emergencies exist is always one of fact and the superintendent of the department can decide it as well as the city solicitor can. There are two classes of emergency, namely, (1) An emergency that calls for immediate and temporary service of an extra fireman. Such emergencies arise when there is a large fire or conflagration, in time of flood or other public disasters, when a fireman is ill and temporarily absent on his vacation. Such an emergency does not arise when a fireman dies or resigns or is removed permanently. (2) There are emergencies sometimes caused by the necessary delays incident to the operation of the law. Such a case would be where a majority of the members of council were absent for any reason and could not vote to fill a vacancy in the fire department, where no list was available from the civil service board, or where for any other reason a permanent vacancy on the fire department could not be immediately filled. In all such cases the council must use all diligence to make a regular appointment and to remove whatever barrier there is to regular procedure under the act.

"5. Did an emergency exist in certain cases?

"This question the city solicitor can not answer unless he is furnished with a statement of all the facts involved in each particular instance. When a case goes to court for trial the judge states what the law is and the jury determines the fact, and I believe that an analagous situation exists in this case. I can only tell you what the law is and you as councilmen must determine whether or not you are proceeding according to law, because you are more familiar wtih the facts than I am.

"6. Is it proper to appoint a man temporarily to serve while certain firemen are on their vacations?

"I understand that all of the positions in the fire department are now permanently filled. Any emergency that requires an extra fireman for a short time would be sufficient, I believe, to support a temporary appointment. It is, therefore, quite proper for the head of the department, Mr. Reeves, to name a man to serve while the regular firemen are on their vacations, unless, of course, the majority of the members of council disapprove the appointment. I think I need not warn you that such appointments should not be unnecessarily protracted. They should end immediately when the emergency ends."

Quake Expert Studies Subject By "Made" Quakes

Rocks On Ocean Bed Found Different From Continents

(International News Service)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 10—Rock which forms ocean basins is different, for the most part, from that which composes continents.

This was revealed by L. Don Leet, Harvard University seismologist, in explaining the proceedure by which dynamite shocks are employed in manufacturing "artificial earthquakes" for the purpose of determining the "velocity of elastic waves in granite."

Made by a small charge of dynamite, the shocks used in the experiments—already under way in Quincy, in territory noted for its granite fields—move the ground so little, Leet said, that instruments which magnify a disturbance 12,000 times have to be used to get a record of them.

"Seismologists have for years studied the velocity with which waves caused by earthquakes travel through and around the earth," the Harvard earthquake said.

"From these studies, they have learned that the rock which forms ocean basins is different from that which composes continents, for the most part. There is no evidence that beneath a veneer of sedimentary rocks, continental foundations are chiefly granite rocks and that these relatively light masses are essentially 'floating' in a dense, solid, crystalline bassalt which forms ocean basins and surrounds the earth as a continuous shell.

"Two fundamental problems connected with the foundations of continents are to determine definitely the nature of the material, and to determine the thickness. Earthquake-waves recorded by seismograph stations less than 700 miles from centers of disturbance give some necessary data.

"Such records have led to the conclusion that certain earthquake-waves travel through the continental foundations at a speed of about 18,000 feet per second, or 3.4 miles per second. Since these waves travel through different materials with different speeds, the next step is to determine the rock which transmits waves of the same character at such a velocity."

It is to collect data on this problem that the Harvard Seismograph Station is working with "artificial earthquakes." The first objective is to determine the velocity of elastic waves in granite, since there is evidence that it may underlie the continents. In order to determine the true velocity at various depths, it is necessary to make a large number of observations in such cases and subject them to mathmatical analysis.

Strange Glow Of Aurora Light Is Reproduced

Scientist Duplicate Glow In Laboratory Test Tube

International News Service Special Correspondent

PASADENA, Calif., July 10.—The Aurora Borealis, that mysterious of light that flames over the North Polar skies in the stratophere, has been captured in a laboratory test tube.

Dr. Joseph Kaplan, scientist of the University of California at Los Angeles, demonstrated his mastery of the Aurora here as he prepared one of many startling scientific exhibits to place before the American Society for the Advancement Society at the mid-summer convention, June 15 to 20.

It was the first time scientists said, that the distincetive light of the Aurora has been reproduced and further study of Dr. Kaplan's results was expected to answer the old question of what the Aurora is.

For one thing, Dr. Kaplan said, the test would open the way for new findings about the vital chemical element, nitrogen.

Science heretofore has regarded the Auroro Borealis, in the northern skies, and its counterpart, the Aurora Australis over the South Pole, as glowing nitrogen in the eerie upper atmosphere. Bombardment of rays from the sun was believed to have caused the nitrogen to glow.

Dr. Kaplan with great difficulty, reproduced the conditions under which nitrogen exists in the stratosphere, recently explored by Auguste Piccard and Charles Kipfer, the European balloonists.

These conditions include extremely rare pressure.

'Our problem" Dr. Kaplan said, "was to make a tube of glass in such a way as to get the upper air conditions where there are no glass walls to confine the gases.

"I succeeded in passing an electrical discharge for a long time through the air in the tube. The air was at a pressure of only one-thousandth of a millimeter, which is one-millionth of the amount of pressure of the air at sea level.

"After several weeks of steady discharge, the walls of the tube gradually were covered with a thin black film, probably some oxide.

"Then the tube began showing the spectrum characteristic of the Aurora.

'At a higher pressure the tube would show the peculiar spectrum of nitrogen under conditions where the nitrogen is breaking up into atoms instead of combining into molecules as nitrogen does in the ordinary air we breathe."

Underworld In New York In Control Battle

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 10.—The New York underworld today continued to fight it out for control of the business of liquor-running and racketeering thrown into chaos from the recent government indictments in Chicago of the "big shots" of the national rum ring, including Al Capone.

Reports of similar conditions in other cities were received by police. The presence of a number of out-of-town gunmen in New York also was reported.

Not since the early days of prohibition when the "centralization" of the nefarious liquor industry was undersay has such a carnival of murder been recorded over a brief period.

The bitterness of the battle between the different factions is reflected in the ferocity which has accompanied each killing.

Slayings have been marked by devlish torture, mutilation and ingenious new devices for putting on the spot.

Unheard of audacity has also been added to the bloody excursions of gangdom in the past few days.

Reno's Jurists, After Cases, Go To Church Posts

Both Divorce Judges In Nevada's Famed City, Active In Church

By CAROL CROSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

RENO, Nevada, July 10.—A pair of tired but cheerful jurists step down from their district court benches at 5 o'clock each day in these rushing times for Reno's famous "divorce mill."

They are District Judges Thomas F. Moran and Benjamin F. Curler. Two of Nevada's well-known men and two of the state's outstanding authorities in the law, they are rapidly becoming two of the most widely known men in America as the divorce "mill" continues its endless grinding.

Both past middle age, the two judges spend Monday of each week granting from 35 to 55 divorces each to people who hail from Hong Kong, Kansas City, Paris and way points.

During the other five court days of the week, the two judges dispose of all the criminal and civil litigation of a large and comparatively populous county.

Despite the heavy burden of their work, Judges Curler and Moran find time for outside interests.

For instance, one would think Sunday morning would be a time of rest for such a busy pair of individuals. It isn't.

Any Sunday morning drop in at the Reno Baptist Church. There, his honor, Judge Moran, will be found teaching a Sunday school class. Then stroll through beautiful Wingfield park to the Christian Science church.

There, his honor Judge Curler will be found reading the scriptures to the congregation.

Witif the advent of ten and even four minute divorces, however, divorce seekers in Reno do not get to know their judges as they did three months instead of forty-two days residence was required in order to get the little roll o paper tied in blue.

A year ago, a pretty young divorcee, in fact almost any seeker after divorce, could go into District Judge George A. Bartlett's chamber and sit there for a nice home-like chat while waiting for her case to be called.

But today, in these times of high-speed mass production, the ten minutes or less allotted to each case allows no time for idle chatter.

There's a bit of routine testimony—occasionally a bit of sobbing or a bit of humor, but seldom anything but monotony—and the thing is over mostly once and for all.

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 10.—Contact with a high tension wire today had snuffed out the life of Norman Haywood, 28, of Dunlevy, who was electrocuted while stringing wire for a camp meeting at Betleyville.

Fellow workers removed Haywood from the pole when his safety belt prevented him from falling. They spent four hours in a rescusitation attempt over his body but their efforts were futile.

Perhaps the people are using less patent medicine now because they depend on tooth paste.

Boro Council Hears Reports For Month

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—The monthly bills were properly accepted by the borough council last night at their regular meeting in the city building. Also a letter of appreciation from members of the Spanish War Veterans to the council, thanking them for the flag which was given them by the council, was placed on file.

Firemen's services were required twice during the month of June. In one there was no damage and in the other which combined three homes there was a total damage of $325. This was caused by lightning. Firemen received $41 for their services.

The monthly report of the police department shows that there were arrests out of which total fines and forfeits yielded $101.25.

The report of the health department shows that there were 11 cases of whooping cough, 2 of measles, and 1 of chicken pox.

Council decided to set aside $1000 for further cleaning up Ewing Park. This work was started sometime ago and wonderful progress has been made. It will be necessary to keep it in satisfactory condition after this labor.

Work on remedying the health condition on South Second street which was caused by dust from the Ellwood Foundry Company, is rapidly progressing and the condition will soon be disposed of.

The recomendation of the electric and light committee of placing an order for 35 cedar poles for wiring purposes was accepted by the councilmen.

Upon the recommendation of the health department council will take action to repair the sewage disposal system which will meet the requirments of the Pennsylvania Health department.

The appointment of the police committee, of Edwin Clark and Chester Young as patrolmen in the local police system was approved. Both men are former police members of this community and are familiar with the methods.

Plan Playground In Ewing Park

Permanent Playground Plot In Park Is Suggested To Council

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—The Borough Council may make plans and reservations for a parmanent playground in this city at Ewing Park.

The plan was forwarded by the Playground Commission of this city. It was pointed out to the council members in a communication that the city has no permanent playground. The present site of the four playgrounds may be used for building purposes in the near future. The site of the suggested permanent playground is the property bounded by Petain street, Adams street, and some Shelby land. This is in Ewing Park and near the picnic grove. It would afford excellent land for the playground. The land should be set aside for the purpose.

To Oppose Freight Service By Bus

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—Council was unanimously in favor of bringing suit against the Harmony Short Line Motor Transportation Company in opposing the latter's freight service between Ellwood-New Castle and Ellwood-Pittsburgh and on routes 315 and 422 it was revealed at their regular meeting last night.

The borough solicitor, J. W. Humphrey was given authority to file suit against the company. All unanimously voted in joining with New Castle to combat the freight service in this locality. The two cities will join in a bill of equity against the Harmony Line.

Local authorities await word from Attorney Robert White of New Castle to swing into action. Attorney White is awaiting word from the Public Service Commission before filing suit.

Danger Pointed Out To Council

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—For the first time in 15 years a danger has been pointed out on Fifth street Bridge that would make the borough liable to a damage suit, as was pointed out by Borough Manager, Lowell W. Monroe.

The base of the electric light posts on the bridge extend over the curb which would not permit an auto to come too close. If some one would accidentally hit one of these extensions it would undoubtedly damage the wheel for which the borough would be liable.

After a serious discussion of the matter council decided to move the electric light posts 7 inches from the curb and eliminate this danger.

Seek Permit To Cut Curbing

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—Permission from council was asked last night to cut the curb on the corner of Sixth street and Chestnut way in order that cars may enter a building there more easily. It is also said that a gas station will be built there.

Council granted the request for the curb to be cut wtih the proper restrictions or as per sketch.

Needy May Work To Meet Taxes

New Plan Is Being Given Trial By Ellwood City Council

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—Having needy families work their taxes out by gradual steps is a plan that will be more widely practiced by the borough council it was decided at their regular meeting last night in the city hall.

The plan had been mildly enforced by the borough for the past two months. People that owed the borough taxes were given employment and half of their wages would go in squaring their account. This has proved successful in other communities and will be tried here for a period.

Councilman M. A. Riley suggested that this plan be more rigidly enforced in order that it may win the approval of the community. It really is an easy way to dispose of your taxes and at the same time be able to support yourself.

The present working plan in the community by Borough Manager, Lowell W. Monroe is to endeavor to give employment to as many people as possible. One group of men is not permitted to do all the work of the community. It is done in shifts so that everybody may get two weeks of work. It is estimated that 175 men will soon be put to work in Ewing Park and paving the approach to the Second street viaduct.

The ordinance on paving and grading the portion of Second street between Fountain avenue and Spring avenue was passed on the second and final reading. This will necessitate the removing of the grass plots on which work is already underway. The paving will conform with the other two streets which it adjoins.

Want Exit From End Of Cedar Way

Council Receives Request In Petition From Citizens Thursday

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—A petition by citizens residing near Crescent avenue and Second street and Cedar way to allow an opening in the eastern part of Cedar way. That part has been closed by a wall on the new Second street viaduct and hinders trucks that travel that way. Cedar way on that end leads onto Second street on the new viaduct.

In order to grant this request the new wall will have to be broken or an adjacent lot will have to be purchased. The matter has been left in the hands of the street committee and the borough manager for further consideration. A report of the situation will be given to council at its next regular meeting.

MISSIONARY MEETING

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10—The Women's Missionary Society of the Bell Memorial church held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. J. W. Mattocks on the New Castle road with a picnic dinner at noon. There were 26 members present and no special guests. The devotionals were led by Mrs. Cora Cover and the Query Corner was led by Mrs. J. A. King. The society was divided into three groups for a contest with the aim for more members and better attendance.

The group will meet again on August 13 at the home of Mrs. Henderson Cunningham, on the New Castle road.

HELEN DUFF CIRCLE

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10—At the meeting of the newly formed girl's circle of the Slippery Rock Presbyterian church yesterday it was decided to call the organization the Helen Duff Circle. After this decision the regular business was taken up and then a delightful luncheon was served by Mrs. George Glasser and Mrs. Paul H. Elliott.

MAY COLLECT GARBAGE HERE

Councilman Riley Suggests Borough Take Over Project To Relieve Menace

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—In order to elimiate a garbage menace to the community Councilman M. A. Riley suggested garbage disposal be taken care of by taxation in this community. The plan was to have trucks call monthly at homes to collect the garbage. If it will be accepted a definite millage will be set.

Recently in the community people have been dumping their garbage in unlawful places and creating a menace to public health. These people will be severely punished when caught. At present there are 800 families out of 2700 that use the city trucks for their garbage disposal. This shows that many people are not using the city dump.

The matter was referred to the health committee and the borough manager for further consideration. The taxation plan would prove more beneficial to the health of the community if accepted.

Give Reception For New Pastor

Trinity Lutheran Congregation Welcomes Rev. Christiansen And Family

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10.—Over 200 people were present to pay honor to Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Christiansen and family by the Trinity Lutheran and Mt. Hope churches in the basement of the former church last night. Rev. Christiansen is the new pastor of the church where he has been in charge for a little over a month. He has acquired a host of friends during this short period.

A splendid program was given in their honor. The devotional period was in charge of A. J. Dambach and consisted of selections by the Sunday school orchestra, hymns, prayers. After this part of the program Mr. Dambach welcomed Rev. Christiansen and family into the large family circle. Rev. Christiansen responded with a few well chosen words. Following this a musical program in charge of Paul Blocher was presented. A solo was given by Paul Browne Patterson of New Castle and was accompanied by Mrs. Patterson. A duet was then given by Mary and Lillian Blocher. Robert Taylor of New Castle, rendered a solo to the favor of the audience. He was accompanied by George T. Atkins, organist of the local church. After a few more selections by the orchestra delicious refreshments were served by the Willing Worker's society which concluded the events of the evening.

Plan Curb Market For Home Gardeners

Will Enable Unemployed To Sell Produce To Citizens Of Borough

ELLWOOD CITY, July 10—A plan that would affect the present curb market was introduced at the council meeting last night in the city building.

There are many acres of land donated to needy families of this city by the borough for the purpose of cultivating. Soon crops will be ripe and there will undoubtedly be a surplus. It was suggested that a place be arranged for the people to dispose of this surplus produce. It will be on the plan of the curb market but will be held every day instead. A place to erect stands has already been selected but the approval of the board of education is necessary, which will be determined at their meeting Tuesday evening.

Church Building Being Improved

Volunteers Are Busily Engaged In Beautifying Edifice

KOPPEL, July 10—Extensive repairs are now under way at the Koppel Methodist Episcopal church, which, when completed, will make it one of the most attractive in this section. The improvements at this time are confined to the exterior as the interior underwent extensive changes but a few years ago.

Nearly all of the work is being done by volunteers of the congregation who have been working on the project for more than a month. It is hoped however, to have the work completed within two weeks.

The colored glass windows and sashes have been repaired or replaced and doors have been refinished and varnished. Steps of concrete and brick are being erected at the front entrance and to the rear of the rectory.

Ground on the west and south sides of the church is being graded and sodded, and this together with the border of hedge already planted, will greatly enhance the beauty of the setting. The hedge also extends north in front of the parsonage.

The present church, which is of brick, was erected in 1914. Rev. S. L. Burson, is in his second year as pastor.

RAINBOW STOPS TRAIN

(International News Service)

NIANTIC, Conn.—Even a pair of express trains thundering along the shore of Long Island Sound here, recently, faltered at the unusual sight of a double rainbow, with ends rising from the inner and outer harbors here, spanning, it seemed, the whole width of the sound. The display is said never to have been noted here before and lasted only half an hour. The trains bound to and from Boston slowed down as passengers crowded to the windows and gazed in awe.

CITY TO USE SOME DIRT IN LAUREL AVE.

Several Park avenue residents today requested council to use dirt from Blaine street, to be paved in Park avenue at North Mercer street. Councilman Treser said that some of the dirt would be needed to fill in a parkway in Laurel avenue and if possible some would also be put at Park avenue and North Mercer street.

Horner Will Make Recommendation

William Nunn today requested city council to permit the Welsh Bus company to have 10 minutes to load and unload along the north side of Public Square, near Jefferson street. The company according to Nunn will rent a room and establish a ticket agency there should permission be granted. The request was referred to Chief of Police Horner for a recommendation.

Britain's Air Force Play War Game

As a fitting finale to their annual aerial pageant at Hendon, Eng., the Royal Air Force gave the populace a taste of what the next war, if any, is going to be. Photo shows a flotilla of bombers executing a raid on an "enemy" village to the accompaniment of much smoke and an inferno of noise. One would imagine that the last thing in the world which England wants to be reminded of is the wartime terror of the raids from the clouds which well nigh demoralized her capital. But the above picture brings back those terrible days vividly and the scene must have been anything but a pleasure for those of the spectators who were unfortunate enough to be in London when it received a call from bombing Zepps.

The Mormons—5. The Pushcart Emigrants

THE MORMON CHURCH MADE MANY CONVERTS IN THE BRITISH ISLES. CROWDS OF THESE ENGLISH MORMONS CAME TO AMERICA TO SETTLE IN SALT LAKE CITY.

(Copyright, 1931, by J. Carroll Mansfield)

IN 1856 A THOUSAND POOR ENGLISH EMIGRANTS, BOUND FOR UTAH, REACHED THE FRONTIER ONLY TO FIND THAT THE MORMONS HAD BEEN UNABLE TO PROVIDE ENOUGH WAGONS TO CARRY THEM ACROSS THE PLAINS.

THEN FOLLOWED ONE OF THE STRANGEST SPECTACLES EVER SEEN ON THE PLAINS. WHEN THE EMIGRANTS MARCHED WEST, A LUCKY FEW RODE IN COVERED WAGONS, BUT THE GREAT MAJORITY WERE ON FOOT, TRUNDLING THEIR MEAGER BELONGINGS IN UNWIELDY PUSHCARTS.

PUSHCARTS,—WITH 800 MILES OF PRAIRIE AND MOUNTAIN COUNTRY BETWEEN THEM AND THEIR DESTINATION! HEROICALLY THEY TRUDGED ON DAY AFTER DAY, SUFFERING HARDSHIPS WHICH INCREASED AS THEY NEARED THE ROCKIES . . . . . .

THEY ESCAPED THE DANGER OF INDIAN ATTACK, BUT WINTER OVERTOOK THEM BEFORE THEY GOT THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS. UNPREPARED FOR SUCH AN ORDEAL, MANY PERISHED OF EXPOSURE, ILLNESS AND SHEER EXHAUSTION.

Map-Flight Of MacMillan A New Adventure

Will Chart Unexplored Coast Of Labrador From Air

(International News Service)

ROCKLAND, Me., July 10.—While non-stop flights across the Atlantic are being recorded one after another, a 1200-mile hop to Nain, Labrador, is being planned by Lieutenant-Commander Donald B. MacMillan, veteran explorer, to map the uncharted and hazardous coast of that region.

The flight, which is to be made in co-operation with Sir Wilfred Grenfell, noted benefactor of the Labrador Eskimos, is expected to take place early in July.

The plane used in the flight will be a 300-horsepower, specially fitted Lockheed Vega monoplane, constructed by a California aircraft manufacturing company, and will be delivered to Commander MacMillan here.

Under present conditions little is known of the coast of Northern Labrador. Marine traffic avoids it as it would an iceberg in mid-ocean. Countless rocks and shoals now threaten the adventurous mariner that might attempt a safe harbor in this bleak stretch.

It is with the object of charting the waters of this marine peril, and the mapping of 3,000 square miles of territory extending along the coast that the expedition is to be made. The job will be done entirely by plane at great risk and with much hardship entailed.

Commander MacMillan was leader of the MacMillan expedition to northern Greenland in 1925 and a veteran explorer of the far North. The plane will be piloted by Charles F. Rocheville, pioneer aviator, and a member of previous MacMillan expeditions.

Razing Of Building Revives Memories

Name Of "Monkey Shop" Clings To Building Long After Story Had Originated

(International News Service)

MILTON, Pa., July 10.—Razing of the "Monkey Shop" at the plant of a car building company here has revived the stories connected with its founding and an attempt to construct a railroad through the Brazilian jungles more than half a century ago.

The jungle railroad was promoted and the rolling stock was to be built at the local shops. The cars ordered for the railroad were narrow gauge affairs, with a little cabin at one end, designed to give shelter to the brakemen.

An imaginative worker at the shops spread the story that the cars were to be operated through the jungles by monkeys specially trained for the task, and that the anthropoid brakemen would be chained in the cabins.

The tale, which spread widely, gave the old building its name and clung to it—even in official railroad correspondence. The jungle railroad project was abandoned after financial set-backs.

Woman Doctor Pleads China's Need Of Schools

Says Nationalist Government Is Best Country Has Ever Had

(International News Service)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 10.—"The Chinese Nationalist government is by far the best ever had. All of its officers are men with Occidental education who are genuinely interested in their country and have its good at heart."

That is the way Dr. Anne Walter Fearn, for thirty-eight years a physician in China, described the nationalist government in speaking before the St. Louis Medical society here.

Political union in all China is impossible, however, because of its vast area, its vast heterogenous poulation and its lack of modern means of transportation and communication, she said.

"It is a polygot country with a different dialect for every village and for each of its 1,000 cities, despite the fact its written language is universal," she declared.

Communication is so slow, she continued, that in 1925 an earthquake in Gansu destroyed hundreds of thousands of lives but the news of it did not reach Peking until three months later, even though the latter city was only 1,500 miles away.

Airplanes and Jimmy Yens schools which teach an alphabet of only 1,000 characters, and more rapid means of communication, she said.

China has suffered more than any other country from the business depression because of her dependence on other nations and because of the decline in the value of silver, which is the basis of the monetary system of the country, Dr. Fearn added.

Dr. Fearn is seeking an endowment fund for the American school in Shanghai. She will return to China soon to resume her practice.

Women On Th' Farm

WOMAN ON TH' MODERN WELL EQUIPPED FARM.

I don't think woman wuz ever cut out fer farm work, an' I think th' headstones in Tharps Run cemetery'll bear me out. She hain't muscled fer it, an' her instincts are finer than a male's, an' not adopted t' hog raisin', grubbin' an' manure spreadin'. Splittin' wood an' plowin' throw a woman's contour out o' drawin'. Mebbe foolin' with chickens, an' even a little moderate churnin', are harmless diversions, that may not enhance feminine beauty or stimulate woman's intellectual qualities, but they do no particular harm. On th' modern, well equipped farm, drudgery has been practically eliminated, an' ther remains little t' do that kin be said t' retard th' intellectual advancement or warp th' frame o' th' farmer's wife, 'cept th' plowin'. I kin recall when a farmer picked out a wife jest like he picked out a work horse. He'd walk 'round her two or three times an' size her up. Mebbe he'd pinch her arms, or look at her teeth, or trot her back an' forth a few times, an' then listen t' her breathin'. He wuz lookin' fer a partner that could grub some new land, or ditch a meadow, or slop hogs. Pickin' out a wife fer farm work wuz a purely business proposition. Th' ole time farmer wanted a good, sound draft wife, one that wuz gentle an' yieldin' an' wouldn' scare—a woman any farmer could drive. Lon Moon's father wore out four wives before he got his farm in good shape. His fifth wife got scared an' ran off th' day he started t' grub a wild plum thicket. He wrote t' her an' promised t' put a pump in th' kitchen if she'd return but his letter come back unopened.

Honor To Man Who Forsees World's End

(International News Service)

BALTIMORE, July 10.—The man who seventeen years ago said the universe was going to pieces, has been awarded an LL.D. degree from Johns Hopkins University.

He is Sir James Hopwood Jeans, noted British mathematician, whose figures on light years and lunar researchers conflict with other learned men on this subject. Jeans is at present at Mount Wilson Observatory, Pasadena, Cal., studying the earth.

He uses mathematics to prove that this universe is just one of 2,000,000 other universes spaced 2,000,000 light years apart and each containing 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 suns despite the efforts of Dr. Robert A. Millikan, American physicist, to dissuade him from his belief that this universe is dying.

He arrives at his computation by the effects of cosmic rays, and, in so doing, falls into error by ignoring the basis of measurment of "hard" cosmic rays, says Dr. Millikan, who believes these rays, whether hard or soft, are building a bigger and better universe.

"The difference comes down to one between quality and quantity," was Sir James' answer to the Nobel prize winner.

Jeans believes the sun's life is one-third gone and the universe is going to pieces, the cosmic rays from the milky way annihilating the universe's atoms. The end however, will not be real soon. Only a million million years, he says.

This man who talks in millions with ease, (not dollars but light years, each one of which is equal to the time it takes a ray of light to travel 5,880,000 million miles) was born in London fifty-three years ago and educated at Cambridge university. He was professor of applied mathematics at Princeton from 1905 to 1909, and from 1919 to 1929 he was secretary of the Royal Society.

Harry Russell Leads Tourists

Four Of Fourteen Air Tourists Reported Missing; Flier Hurt In Martins Ferry, O.

(International News Service)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 10.—Harry Russell still held first place on unofficial figures in the National Air tour as the planes planned to fly today to Sky Harbor, near Murfreesboro, Tenn. An official check was to be made this morning but timers said Russell was believed in the lead.

Four of the 14 planes were missing today. Harvey Mummert crashed near Middlesboro, Ky. Walter Henderson was unreported but was believed to have returned to Huntington, W. Va., where the ships took off yesterday. Eddie Schneider, 19-year old junior transcontinental flight holder, was forced down near Middlesboro.

Charles F. Sugg, Detroit, who sustained injuries when his plane crashed at Yorkville, was reported in critical condition at Martins Ferry, O.

KIDDIES ENJOY HOT DOG PICNIC

Albert Street Playground Youngsters Have Weiner And Marshmallow Roast

Hot dogs and buns composed the delicious menu served around a camp fire at the Albert Street playground Thursday evening to a crowd of 75 enthusiastic youngsters.

A roaring bon-fire was built in a woodsy spot of the playground and the boys and girls unwrapped the buns they had brought, roasted wieners, slipped the sizzling dogs inside the buns and with wide grins on their little faces the dogs were devoured in no time.

Then there were marshmallows and the children had great fun toasting them over the fire.

It was great fun for the young folks and credit for the event goes to the supervisor of the playground —Miss Betty Grover. The Albert street playground is one of a number maintained through the summer by the city. And it is a popular rendezvous for the children of that district.

Says Many Germans Starved During War

(International News Service)

BERLIN, July 10—Four hundred thousand German men, women and children starved to death during the war and the "hunger blockade" following the armistice, according to Professor Karl Kisskalt.

In an article in the Munich Medical Journal, Professor Kisskalt states that in the sanatarium of Neustadt, in Holstein, alone 474 patients died out of a total of 800. The death certificates gave as the cause of death "heart muscle degeneration," but the autopsies revealed complete lack of fat. The certification of hunger as the cause of death was forbidden.

Woman Singer Heads Business

Is Recognized Authority On Sewer Construction Work

CHICAGO, July 10. — A Chicago woman who became discouraged with her operatic studies and turned to the world of business, heads one of the largest clay products firms in the country, and is a recognized authority on sewer construction and building tile.

Mrs. Astrid Rosing Sawyer, born in Copenhagen, Denmark, has another claim to distinction in that her husband as acting engineer of the company she started 18 years ago, obeys her orders.

After her migration to America Mrs. Sawyer became a clerk to pay for her singing lessons. Dissuaded from an opera career by her mother, the young woman decided upon a commercial career. Employed by a clay products firm, she studied the business until she acquired sufficient knowledge to head her own firm.

That was in 1913. Now her company ships to all parts of the United States, and into Canada and Mexico. Her advice had been solicited in the construction of sewers for municipalities in the Chicago region. She has been called in consultation on projects in all parts of the country.

She recalls a contract for an order of 2,000,000 hollow brick, and another for 1,500 carloads of stone and gravel as two of her biggest orders.

Mrs. Sawyer retained her interest in music and combined it with her business acumen to become manager for the productions of her former music teacher.

Interstate War Over Auto Licenses

(International News Service)

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., July 10.—Interstate warfare came to light here recently when truck owners of a Georgia circus were compelled to replace their automobile license plates of that state with Ohio tags.

The plates were paid for under protests by the owners of the transports at the price of $322. State officials said the reason for the action was that the state of Georgia has failed to observe the unwritten law of reciprocity," in honoring Ohio tags.

The warfare between the states extends only to the operators of trucks from Ohio, it was said. One Akron concern that delivered tires to Georgia cities was compelled to stop its interstate traffic between Georgia because of the high tariff Georgia assessed on its trucks when traveling on the southern state's highways.

The assessment by the Ohio government on the circus' trucks was made in the hope that the state of Georgia would rescind its non-reciprocity license law, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Chalmers Wilson announced.

Bunch Of Violets Makes Heap Of Woe

(International News Service)

MEULAN, France, July 10.—Tying a bunch of flowers to her doorknob is the approved way of designating the girl of your choice in the village of Mountainville, near here.

So Raymond Trichot, the dashing millionaire of the village, saw red when he arrived with at least ten dollars worth of roses and saw the modest bunch of violets from his rival.

He hunted up Fernand Philamand and proceeded to beat him. Fernand's father interfered, so Raymond beat him too. Then the cops interfered. And now Raymond is in jail, Fernand's father in a hospital and Fernand and his girl were left clasped in each other's arm on the field of honor.

If a child's behavior is perfect he isn't normal, asserts Dr. Virgil E. Dickson of the University of California. However, there is little occasion to worry; just let him alone and he will recover.—The San Antonio Evening News

Pirates Again Topple Chicago

Pittsburgh Pirates Win Second Straight From Cubs, Thursday, 4-2

REMY KREMER IS WINNING PITCHER

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 10.—For the second time in two days the Pittsburgh Pirates proved masters over the Chicago Cubs when they defeated the Chicagoans on Thursday afternoon here. The score was 4-2.

Remy Kremer looked like himself as he limited the Hornsby men to nine scattered bingles. Teachout was on the rubber for the Cubs and his offerings were found for 12 blows. The Cubs took a one run lead in the fourth inning but the Pirates tied the score in the sixth and then scored three more runs in the seventh and eighth.

Wilson and Hornsby each had two hits apiece to feature for the Cubs while Phillips, Comorosky and Kremer were the heavy hitters for the Smoky City nine.

Englishman Leads Canadian Tourney

Leads Opening Day's Round On Thursday With Score Of 67

(International News Service)

TORONTO, July 10.—The Canadian open golf championship trophy may journey across the Atlantic ocean for the first time in the history of the tournament it appeared today.

Percy Allis, stocky Englishman, who is the professional at the Wansee club of Berlin, shattered all marks for the tricky Mississauga course here today in the opening day's round to finish one stroke in front of three American sharpshooters.

His record-breaking card of 67, was one stroke better than that of Tommy Armour, British open titleholder and defending champion; Walter Hagen, United States Ryder cup captain, and W. H. "Whiffy" Cox, Brooklyn. Allis knocked off five strokes from par.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS' LAND

Teddy Yarosz leaped into the limelight at Pittsburgh last night when he walloped Buck McTiernan in a 10 round bout. Yarosz moved fast, weaved good and according to reports hit McTiernan at will in almost every round. Buck tried a last round rally but Teddy gave as much as he received in the round.

The Handicap pace, feature on the North Randall card, was won by Calumet Adam yesterday with Fred Egan in the surrey. He was an odds-on favorite at 8 to 10.

Sharkey To Start Outdoor Training

Will Start Outdoor Operations For Walker Bout July 22, On Saturday

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 10.—The fact that bad weather has interfered considerably with Jack Sharkey's training schedule at his camp in Pompton Lakes, N. J., is worrying Jack's admirers far more than it is America's star heavyweight.

Some of those Sharkey admirers are openly expressing the fear that Jack isn't taking seriously his fifteen-round championship battle with Mickey Walker at Ebbets Field on the night of July 22.

Jack said today he would positively begin outdoor operations at Pompton Lakes tomorrow.

Stance On Green May Differ; It's Stroke That Counts

By ROY GROVE
Central Press Golf Writer

NUMBER 41

Form differs on the putting green in a more radical fashion than in any department of golf. The reason for this is naturalness and comfort.

For Leo Diegel, Johnny Farrell or Walter Hagen to change over their stances to that of Bobby Jones would ruin their games—until they had become accustomed to the new style.

The best of younger playing professionals use the Jones stance today. Those who hold a different form started their games long before Jones.

Barnes bends far over the ball with his feet apart but the weight and control of the arms and wrists do not change from the true putting form.

The right arm rests against he leg and the weight is on the left foot. This steadies his stroke.

The success of a putt is the smooth, steady stroking of the ball regardless of how you stand.

With the weight under control and with the wrists working with clocklike manner and with the club finishing out toward the hole, there should be no excuse for a bad putt.

Washington Advances By Defeating Boston As Philly Loses To Yanks

BROOKLYN BEATS BOSTON BRAVES, 6-2

By COPELAND C. BURG
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, July 10.—Although the Yanks beat the champion Athletics yesterday, 9 to 4, the best proof of what New York expects of Manager McCarthy's men this season is shown today in the promises of New York writers as to what great things McCarthy is going to do in 1932. The lowly Pirates humbled Chicago again, 4 to 2, to send the Bruins five and one-half games to the rear.

With Burleigh Grimes and Paul Derringer clicking like the Winnie Mae over Siberia, St. Louis downed the Cincy Reds twice, 3 to 1 and 9 to 1. Johnson and Benton limited the champions to five hits, whereas Grimes gave six but used Scotch judgment in the pinches.

Brooklyn kept in a virtual tie with the Giants for the runner-up honors in the National League as Clark starved the Boston Braves with eight scattered safeties. The score was: Robins 6, Braves 2.

Washington had such an easy time with the Boston Red Sox that Masters, the University of Penn boy, went in the final inning and he managed to hand out only one hit, the Senators winning, 14 to 1.

The Cleveland Indians left 14 men on base and the ball game went to Chicago's Sox, 3 to 0. Frasier was good for only six hits, but he walked nine Cleveland batsmen.

Whitehill kept the St. Louis Browns to three hits in seven innings, then weakened, finally staggering to a 11 to 7 win for the Detroit Tigers. McManus, Bengal third baseman, got four clouts, batting in four runs.

The Giants' 9 to 3 triumph over the Phillies was costly, as Lindstrom sustained an injury which may keep him idle for weeks. Hubbell was better than three of the Phillies' so-called hurlers.

Central Christians Wallop Trinity, 17-6

The Central Christian mushball team walloped the Trinity church team 17-6 on Thursday in a game played on Franklin Field.

Four Matches In Tennis Tourney

Tilden, Richards, Burke And Kozeluk Favored To Win Semi-Finals

(International News Service)

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., July 10.—Four matches in the quarter final at the National Professional Tennis Championship today were expected to prove thrillers. Vincent Richards, defending champion, will play Bobby Seller, San Francisco; Karel Kozeluk, the Czechoslovakian master of defense, will oppose Francis T. Hunter, New Rochelle, N. Y.; William T. Tilden will face Emmett Burke, the French Irishman.

Tilden, Richards, Burke and Kozeluk were favored to come through to tomorrow's semi-finals.

Hunter is playing a strong game and Kozeluk may encounter serious difficulties. Kozeluk had little chance to show his class yesterday as he won in straight sets from Rudolph Nobel, New York, the same was true of Hunter who took James Burns, Jr., New York in love sets.

Tilden romped over James H. Mitchell, Richmond, Va., 6-0, 6-1, 6-0 but Richards has a stiff fight against Paul Heyton of Washington, D. C., finally emerging victorious, 6-3, 6-0, 6-4.

Burke showed great form winning 6-2, 6-1, 6-0 from John Cardegha of the Adrsley club.

Richards' play was below par and Heston's swift service bothered him.

In Addition To Rounding Bases Three Times, Hits Triple

July Tourney Starts Soon At Municipal Links

Entries Are Now Being Received From Players Who Have Established Handicaps

Plans are now being completed by Manager "Hub" Hart of the Municipal Golf course, for the annual July tournament, which will get under way within the next few days.

A field of approximately fifty players have turned in their scores for their handicaps, but formal entry must be made by those expecting to play in the tournament, Manager Hart stated this morning, a fact which few seem to appreciate.

Those who wish to take part should turn in their entry fee at once and the play can be started as soon as convenient for the players.

The prize to be distributed to the winners will depend on the amount of the entry fee.

There will be two classes entered. Class A and Class B, the latter class comprising the novices, who are shooting around the hundred mark, while the Class A group will include the better golfers.

Five Of Seven Bouts Arranged

Kittanning Boxers To Tackle Local Boxers Here

Five of seven four-round bouts to be staged one week from Monday night at the open air bowl at Grant and State streets have been arranged and it looks as though pugilistic fans will get another fistic meal, similar to that served when the four rounders were introduced a few weeks ago.

When the four rounders were introduced they provided plenty of action and fans who witnessed the fistic battles had nothing to regret after they left the hall. Several upsets occurred, especially when Merle Gibson beat Frankie Frey and landed in the graces of fandom.

The bouts arranged so far follow:

Kid Wright, New Castle, vs Billy Frengel, New Castle, 143 pounds.

Merle Gibson, New Castle, vs Baby Kid Barry, Kittanning, 160 pounds.

Bill Donnelli, New Castle vs Joe Levoskey, Kittanning, 163 pounds.

Billy Mido, New Castle, vs Jackie Ruffner, Kittanning, 120 pounds.

Ollie Pollard, New Castle, vs Don Sheen, New Castle, 133 pounds.

HAPPENINGS IN WORLD OF SPORT

Giants' Fielder Seriously Hurt

Fred Lindstrom Fractures Bone Of Left Foot While Sliding Into Third Base

WEAKENS GIANTS' CHANCES OF TITLE

By LES CONKLIN
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK July 10—Fate, which has dealt many a winning hand to John J. McGraw in his thirty-one years as a big league baseball manager, reached out today and smacked the veteran pilot squarely on the whiskers.

For McGraw's Giants, who had a glittering chance this season to win the fiery leader his first national league pennant in seven years, appeared today to be doomed to wind up another campaign among the also rans. Their 1931 pennant hopes received a body blow in Philadelphia yesterday when Fred Lindstrom, New York right fielder, fractured a bone in the instep of his left foot while sliding into third base.

Indications were that Lindy would be lost to the club for at least a month and possibly for the remainder of the season. Loss of his services for even a month would seriously cripple the team.

Lindstrom, a vital cog in the New York machine, is the apple of McGraw's eyes. A reliable hitter, fast on the bases and a star in his new role of outfielder, he has been one of the outstanding performers of the national pastime since the world series of 1924 when at the tender age of eighteen, he played a substitute's role against Washington with the poise of a veteran.

His loss means that Leach and Allen must be used simultaneously in the New York outfield instead of being alternated in left field against right-hand and southpaw pitching. This will weaken the team's attack unless McGraw decides to take a chance on Fullis in rightfield and Fullis is no Lindstrom.

SPYING ON SPORTS
BY WILLIAM RITT

Central Press Sports Editor

Somewhere out on the gray-green swell of the north Atlantic, 10 tiny craft, their bows pointed stubbornly at a rocky shore thousands of miles away below the bend of the sea, are engaged in one of the queerest—and sportiest—races man has ever arranged.

Those transatlantic racing boats must look like white butterflies drifting slowly over a gigantic pool. It's too bad you and I cannot see this race. It might make some of these fights, ball games and other sporting spectacles that set a fellow raving look pretty small potatoes, indeed.

Few, if any, spectators will see the race before it ends. Yachting enthusiasts viewed the start at Newport, R. I. But the boats were soon quickly lost in a hazy fog. Anxious spectators will see them as all 10—one hopes—sail bravely into Plymouth harbor and the shelter of England's shore.

But between Newport and Plymouth the lone spectators, if any, will be crew and passengers of ocean liners chancing to pass the gallant craft.

Until Plymouth is sighted, dead ahead, the chief competitor, the real foe of these racing boats, will not be each other, but the weather. Heavy seas rolling up from the horizon, storms flashing down from the sky, and fog, thick, soupy, endless fog.

Fog will give these hardy sportsmen their greatest worry. For fog is the hardest of weather's vagaries to combat. A sturdy ship, such as these, can ride out a storm, can manage through a calm, but fog is another story.

That's why most of the craft probably will steer their course between parallels of 45 and 40 latitude—to escape fogs and headwinds as much as possible. Above 45 the weather's not so good, say seamen.

The great danger of fog to the racing craft would be, of course, collision. Not only collision between competing craft but with one of the great ocean liners which ply this same course. It will take wary going if fog blankets much of the course while the little ships are laboring through the steamship lanes. An ocean liner can plunge toward a fog-blinded boat in a twinkling and without warning.

That the racing boats will encounter some bad weather is almost a foregone conclusion. The ships must be out at sea for close to a month and it is almost impossible to sail the Atlantic for such a period without encountering some weather difficulties.

However, the men sailing these tiny ships are all experts. They know as much about their sport, if not more, than the star golf professional, the big league pitcher and the champion fighter. It must be a great sport—but they can have it.

ROBINS REDEEM SELVES AFTER TWO MONTHS' DELAY

On their way at last after two months' dalliance in the second division, the Brooklyn Robins have once more become the pennant threat they were expected to be before the season began. Leaders in the Flatbush Flock's thrilling pennant drive include Babe Herman, top left; Dazzy Vance, top right; Del Bissonette, lower left, and Al Lopez, lower right. Center is Manager Wilbert Robinson, Brooklyn's vetern boss, who has won two pennants for Flatbush.

Ball Yard Banter

They may look red-hot when playing for dear old Alma Mater but most of these college stars find that getting by in a big league unie or even a big minor league unie is something else again. What these college brilliants lack, almost without exception, is experience.

The latest collegiate baseball star to prove the truth of that rule is Wesley Fesler, ex-Ohio State football and diamond star.

Wes was a great all-around athlete in Western conference circles. He not only was selected as an All-American gridder for three seasons, but was also a first-class ball player during his college career. On graduation, big ball clubs scrambled for his signature.

The St. Louis Cardinals got him and sent him to Columbus for seasoning, but now it seems that even the American association is a bit too tough for him.

Fesler has been shipped to Houston, the Cardinals' Texas league farm. The Texas team will use Wesley regularly in the outfield in hopes that seasoning will develop him into major league stature. However, Wesley's consolation is that many another college star had to go through the same experience.

* * *

To name a few: Lou Gehrig, Bruce Caldwell, George Earnshaw, Mickey Cochrane, Freddy Maguire, Travis Jackson, Charley Gehringer, and Gabby Hartnett.

Few, indeed, are those college stars who jumped from campus to the big time and stayed there. Two notable players who enjoyed such a change are Cy Williams and Frankie Frisch. Cy went from Notre Dame to the Chicago Nationals and Frisch left Fordham university for the New York Giants.

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 10.—Midget Wolgast, flyweight champion of the world, defends his title against Ruby Bradley, over the 15-round route in the Coney Island Stadium tonight.

Four League Games Here On Saturday

Lawrence County League Teams Battle In Second Half Race Tomorrow

With the second half race well underway now, the different Lawrence County baseball league teams will resume play on Saturday afternoon. Four games are listed for tomorrow afternoon.

The games Saturday:
Bessemer at Universal Sanitary.
West Pittsburg at Shenango Pottery.
Wampum at Hillsville.
Scarazzos at Brent.
North Highland idle.

One of the important settos scheduled is the Scarazzo-Brent contest. Due to the fact the North Highland team is not scheduled to play, the Scarazzos who are deadlocked with the Highlanders for first place can forge on top if they defeat the Brent aggregation. The Highland team and the Scarazzos are tied with three victories and no defeats to date.

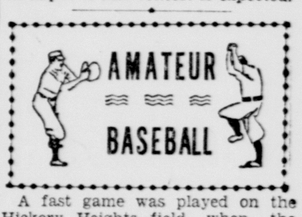

Fast games are anticipated for Saturday afternoon.

GUM CLOGS MOTORS

but TYDOL Gasolines are 99 28/100 % Gum-Free

Gum lurks in improperly refined gasolines . . . Waiting to injure your motor . . . With sticky valves. With clogged feed lines. With hard carbon. With repair bills.

But gum has been outlawed by both Hi-test TYDOL and TYDOL-ETHYL. New equipment costing millions takes out the gum at the refinery. Gum never gets into a TYDOL pump, nor into the gas-tank or motor of a TYDOL user.

Both Hi-test TYDOL and TYDOL-ETHYL are actually 99 98/100 % gum-free. All other gasolines are not necessarily gummy gasolines. But how can you tell? You are always sure of a clean, gum-free motor with TYDOL. Why take a chance?

Change today to gum-free, trouble-free TYDOL Gasolines . . . the last change you'll ever make.

The Tide Water Oil Sales Corporation, New Castle, Pa.

Use ANTI-CARBON VEEDOL with Anti-Gum TYDOL

VEEDOL fights carbon like TYDOL fights gum.

VEEDOL is 99.1% carbon-free. Carbon-forming compounds are removed in the same modern refinery that makes TYDOL Gasolines 99 28/100 % gum-free.

A single carbon-removing job may cost you as much as your entire oil bill for a year. Use anti-carbon VEEDOL and save this money.

Drain and refill today. Anti-carbon VEEDOL plus anti-gum TYDOL will keep your motor clean as you drive your car.

NEW YORK STOCKS

Little Price Change In Market Trading

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 10.—Industrial stocks and Utilities settled down to a slightly lower level of prices this morning, while the Rails firmed up on the slightly improved car loadings reports. A further drop in German government bonds in our markets and the weakness of stocks on the Berlin Bourse was evidence aplenty of the uneasiness still existing over the whole war-debt and economic position of Germany, whose bankers are striving for new loans.

Steel stocks were irregular and inclined to lower levels while awaiting the Steel corporation's monthly tonnage report at noon. Bethlehem lost about 1½ at 46¾ on rumors of possible further reduction in the dividend, which has already been cut from $6 to $4. A rate of $2 annually is looked for. U. S. Steel of 1¼ at 95⅝. Losses of a point or less were recorded in General Motors, Foreign Power, United Corporation, American Tel and Tel and other favorites in the dullest of professional trading.

Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, Southern Pacific and other well known Rails were in demand at slightly higher prices. Baltimore and Ohio up about 1½ at 60. Gillettee Razor was the weak spot, and Alaska Juneau the strong spot of the specialties. Gillette fell off to a new low at 19¼, while Juneau, behind good pool support, moved ahead to 16⅝. DuPont was well bought around 88 and Drug Inc at 74.

The market was at a standstill half-way through the second hour the same was true of the Commodity markets, where prices were generally lower. German International 5½ per cent bonds stlled down about 2 points and American bonds were steady. Call money renewed at 1½ per cent.

European Art Not Touched By Depression, Says Saint Gaudens

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, July 10—European art has not been neglected in the face of the present worldwide depression, Homer Saint Gaudens, director of fine arts at the Carnegie Institute of Technology here, said upon his return from a four-months sojourn in several continental countries. While abroad he arranged for the foreign display of paintings for the Thirtieth Carnegie Institute International Exhibition of Modern Paintings in Pittsburgh, October 15.

"Economic Europe is not affected as the United States is. The depression is much less," he said. "There is no question in my mind after my visit, especially to Eastern Europe, that there has been a tremendous improvement in conditions in the last three years. Through Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Poland and Germany the social order is universally better for art.

"Just because of the depression Europe is not neglecting art. I understand that Austria, poor and small as the nation is, makes up an annual deficit of over $500,000 to support her opera and national theater. Hungary is art conscious these days; the extent and value of her paintings is remarkable. I do not feel any lack of optimism among the European artists because of economic conditions."

St. Gaudens reported he found no startling changes in European art which he described as having reached a stage of "stabilization." Remaining fundamentally the same, he found, was the basic principle "that American art is more objective and European art is more subjective."

"European art is both less academic and less advanced than it used to be. There are more young men appearing and old men disappearing, as usual," St. Gaudens related. "The changes in art, while gradual, do not continue at the same pace.

"The young men these days are not bringing in many innovacations. Rather, they are talking innovations that were started some time ago and refining and modifying them.

"The extremely modernistic, that is, abstract artists are not much on the wane as taking their specialized place in life, like chintz curtains and advertising science. I believe that the era of revolutions is closing and that an epoch of considered development and of changes that were iniated directly after the war is ahead of us."

St. Gaundens was extremely impressed by what he termed the "understanding of art as an imaginative exercise" which he found prevalent in European countries. He said the European has divorced his understanding of art from the idea of "sugar sweet recreation."

Vice-Consul Jailed

Possible international complications were precipitated in a Chicago police court when Senor Adolfo Dominguiz (above), Mexican Vice-Consul to Chicago, allegedly defied Judge Thomas A. Greene to stop him from the old Mexican custom of talking. His defiance, however, only landed him in a cell.

Pledged Support

Announcement by Dr. Hans Luther (above), president of the Reichsbank, Berlin, that 1,000 German banks and industrial concerns had agreed to deposit with the Gold Discount Bank, a subsidiary of the Reichsbank, a total of 500,000,000 marks (about $119,000,000) was expected to quiet the nervousness of outside creditors of German industries. The pledged fund guarantees repayment of commercial loans and therefore is of vast importance to creditors outside Germany.

KILL MUSIC TAX

(International News Service)

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—A bill to make all music teachers pay a $1 license fee annually was gently sung to sleep here in the senate education committee. "This bill has caused more discord than any other before the committee," said Senator Herbert Slater, the chairman, in referring to statewide protests received.

There are nine rivers in the United States that measure more than 1,000 miles in length.

Praises Women

An increasing number of daily newspapers will be edited by women, it is predicted by Mrs. Eleanor Patterson (above), editor of the Washington, D. C., Herald. Women will be real editors as powerful as notable male editors, she told a national audience of her sex when she broadcast recently.

Couple of Fans

Two great men in their widely separated lines of endeavor, President Hoover and Connie Mack are shown chatting at the Washington ball park, when the Chief Executive laid aside cares of office to witness the Senators and Athletics battle. Connie, you'll remember, is famous in his field for piloting his boys to two world championships in two years.

United States Firms Benefit Under New Law

Are Given Preference In Bidding On Government Contracts

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Representatives of firms seeking to sell to the Army and Navy, seriously handicapped in recent years by underbidding of foreign firms, already are beseiging government purchasing agents in anticipation of the approach of July 1, it was learned today.

On that date, no longer will the War and Navy Departments be bound by a law of 1901 to accept the lowest bid although it were from a foreign firm in competition with American manufacturers. In both the Army and Navy supply bills enacted at the last session of Congress, clauses were inserted giving American firms preference regardless of a lower foreign bid provided the quality of goods was up to standard.

Only recently, it was revealed that the War Department, under the old law, was compelled to accept a low bid from an American firm dealing in Soviet Russian matches, and purchase a large quantity of Russian made safety matches for use of the Army.

Officials of the War and Navy Departments expect the new order will mean some little increase in cost, but they will have more latitude in the matter of purchasing supplies.

Where quality of the American made goods does not equal the quality of the foreign goods, however, the law provides authority for accepting the foreign bid. Officials expect this provision in the law effective July 1 will tend to keep up quality if the American bids are "reasonable." Here again is a saving provision which will prevent gouging, they say.

Seeks Presidency

The Presidential bee already has started its buzzing with enthusiasm. Former United States Senator Joseph Irvin France (above) has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for President. Mr. France is regarded as an authority on Russian affairs. He will discuss what he regards as the issue of the campaign at a public meeting July 11 at his estate, Mount Ararat Farms, near Port Deposit, Md.

Champs Count Bulls-Eyes

Vet Finds New Art in Glass

Harry A. Clanton, World War veteran of North Carolina, has discovered a new glass decorating process which has been described as revolutionary. An accidental explosion of chemicals that spattered a container with a marvelous pattern of variegated colors enabled Clanton to work out the new system. Two vases treated with the novel coloring process were brought to the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., where an official said he had never seen anything before like the remarkable color work. Clanton is shown with the vases.

Curtis Talks at Mooseheart

Vice President Charles Curtis was the principal speaker at Mooseheart, Ill., when 12,000 members of the Loyal Order of Moose and their families, together with 500 public officials of northern Illinois, inspected the model home for children maintained by the Moose. Vice President Curtis (left) is shown being introduced by Rodney H. Brandon, high Moose official.

Mothers Should Be Schooled In Baby Care, Says Helen Hayes

International News Service taff Correspondent

CHICAGO, July 10.—Helen Hayes, the petite actress whose baby was called "an act of God," has been giving advice to other, less publicized mothers.

Parenthood, she says, should be a separate profession and should be attempted only after a period of thorough, compulsory training.

"I feel that every mother should have specialized training in the care of babies," states Miss Hayes, who appeared here recently in "Petticoat Influence."

The "act of God" infant, Mary now more than fourteen months old is getting expert attention, according to Miss Hayes and her husband, Charles MacArthur, co-author of the "Front Page."

Mary's birth stopped the play, "Coquette," in which Miss Hayes was starring. When other members of the cast sued Jed Harris, the producer, for their salaries, Harris said he could not fulfill the contracts because an "act of God" had intervened.

"Without specialized study, I would not think of caring for Mary myself," says Miss Hayes. "All her life she has been under the care of a competent nurse.

"I know many mothers will criticize me, arguing that only a mother can care properly for a child. This may be true for primitive women, but we have become so civilized that mother nature simply can't get to us.

"Besides in an age when we spend long years of training to be doctors lawyers or actresses, why should we think the mere process of bringing children into the world should automatically fit us to minister to their physical needs?"

Four cardinal sins of which many parents are guilty, in Miss Hayes opinion, are;

Pushing children at a rate beyond their natural mental progress.

Talking "down to children. "Baby talk probably disgusts even babies."

Mistaking vanity for maternal solicitude.

Explorer Tells Of Mayan Cities And A Hermit "1,000 Years Old"

By JAMES C. SIMONS
International ews Service Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, July 10.—Ancient cities nearly as large as Los Angeles, buildings of immense size, often covering 50 acres of ground, rescue by a mysterious hermit and giant reptiles.

All of these have their respective places in a weird tale of adventure—a tale of exploration in one of the most mysterious parts of the world, the home of the ancient Mayas in Yucatan, Mexico.

The story has just been told by Dr. Stacy-Judd, noted explorer and author.

Dr. Stacy-Judd said in his several months exploration in the Mayan ruins, located in the heart of the dense Yucatan jungles of Old Mexico, he was lost in a great cavern of roofless "caves" and was rescued by a mysterious hermit who said that he was "1000 years old" and was guarding the Mayan gold.

In his exploration of the dense jungles, Dr. Stacy-Judd told of fighting giant reptiles, and of the discovery of ancient buildings of immense size, sometimes a single building covering 50 acres of ground.

He also told of finding an old abandoned "fliver" automobile in the Yucatan jungle.

He related how he went without food and water when his supplies were lost and how he and his guide were saved from dying of thirst when a clear sky clouded up and it began to rain, permitting him to obtain water out of cisterns built thousands of years ago by Indians.

"Some of the ancient cities that we visited were almost as large as "Los Angeles," he said. "I think these Mayans came to this continent from the lost continent of Atlantis. They built enormous cities and temples. Their language was a root language, not connected with any known modern or ancient language.

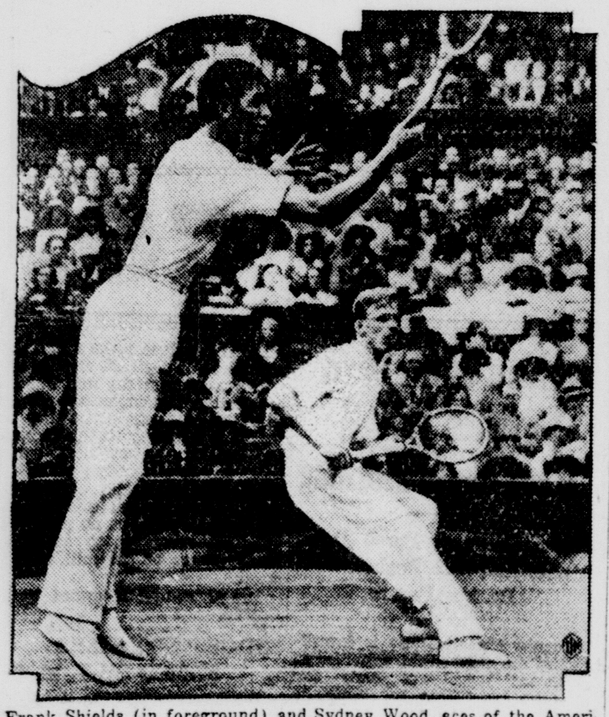

"We lost the ability to read that language when the Spaniards prohibited the Mayans from reading and writing it. They still speak their ancient tongue," Dr. Stacy-Judd said.

He explained how he used copper tools, which had ben hardened more than 1000 years ago. He also found a stick of rubber in a place where no white foot ever trod before and that rubber was still resilient after 1000 years.

Queer fish in the depths of the South Seas have lured the William K. Vanderbilts and five of their friends away from New York society for 10 months. On the Vanderbilt yacht, Alva, they have left Northport, L. I., for a 30,000-mile cruise in quest of maritime specimens for the American Museum of Natural History. They plan to take colored movies and make sound records under water, as well as catching rare fish. The Vanderbilts and their boat are above.

New Monoplane Flies With Only Rudder Control

WINGS FUNCTION AUTOMATICALLY

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 10.—A new type of monoplane successfully tested on a flight through dence fog and clouds to San Francisco and return has demonstrated progress in airplane development.

Except for the use of the rudder, the craft requires practically no handling by the pilot. Take-offs and landings are almost entirely automatic. When the desired altitude is reached a stabilizing elevator at the tail is set. The rudder is then the only control manipulated.

The wings, of overhead type, are fastened to the fuselage by wovable steel tubes which enable the wings to function automatically in different air and weather conditions.

The device keeps the craft level and makes stalling or spinning impossible since the movable wings respond instantly to changing wind currents, preventing loss of speed.

G. Wilbus Cornelius, transport pilot who developed the Freewing, flew the automatically controlled craft on the round-trip test flight.

Through the dense fog and clouds the pilot rode with "hands off," he explained. He described the sensation of riding through the murky skies blindly, as that of flying upside down. He was confident in the ability of his craft however, and stuck it out until the plane practically landed itself at the San Francisco flying field.

On the return trip Cornelius carried a passenger. The stabilizor on the elevator again was set, and the craft took care of itself on the homeward flight, landing at the starting point without altering its course for fog or cloud banks.

The demonstration of the monoplane was expected to aid aviation engineers in perfecting airplanes for fool proof flying in bad weather. Inclement weather has caused a large percent of fatal airplane accidents.

SAN DIEGO, Calif.—A boat load of excursionists on the bay here received a thrill they had not expected. A short distance from land a gigantic black shap loomed up before the small boat. Number Of Autos In State Increases

Despite Depression More Autos Are Registered In Pennsylvania

(Special To The News)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10.—If owning a motor vehicle is a blessing, residents of Pennsylvania are about 10 times as fortunate as the average person in the world at large, according to figures compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and the Department of Commerce.

There is one registered motor vehicle for every 54 inhabitants of this planet, while the average in Pennsylvania is one such vehicle for every 5.4 persons. The average for Pennsylvania, however, is somewhat lower than for the country as a whole, there being one motor vehicle for every 4.5 persons in the United States.

Despite the economic depression the number of motor vehicles registered in the Keystone state is steadily increasing. There were 20,238 more motor vehicles in the state at the beginning of this year than at the beginning of last. Only five states showed a greater increase than did Pennsylvania.

In the total number of motor vehicles registered at the beginning of this year, only three of the 48 states showed a greater number than the Keystone state.

Robbers Work Hard To Enter Mill At Wampum In Morning

Persistent Yeggs Force Door, Safe And Cash Register—Destroy Papers

County Detective Lee is investigating the methodical activities of persistent yeggs who early this morning broke into the Wampum flour mill, at Wampum, forced the cash register and office safe and destroyed valuable papers but left without finding any money.

The thieves arrived at their objective, the safe, after a systematic procedure. First they forced the door of a tool house near the P. & L. E. railroad depot near the mill, taking a crowbar. They next attempted to jimmy a door of the mill building, but finding that impossible, proceeded to the basement where they succeeded in forcing open the door with the crowbar. They next worked their way to the office, which they ransacked thoroughly. The cash register was opened and the safe door pried open, but no money was obtained, according to authorities. Many papers of the mill were destroyed.
